Conferees Disagree on Raids by Bandit

By STUART GODWIN.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

New London, Sept. 14. — The first problem on which the American and Mexican commissioners here have failed to reach a common ground of understanding was confronted today. After listening further to the views of General Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff of the army, regarding border conditions, an effort was begun to fix responsibility for the Columbus raid, as well as the Carrizal and Parral incidents.

The American commissioners insisted that the de facto government accept responsibility for the Columbus raid. The Mexican commissioners contended that the American commander at Columbus had advance information of the intended Villista raid and that no blame attached to the Carranza government.

To this the American commissioners responded that the raiders came from and returned to the territory supposed to be under control of the de facto Mexican government, and that therefore the blame and responsibility should be placed there.

In regard to the Parral incident, the commissioners were just as far apart. The Mexican commissioners declared that the American troops in attempting to pass through the town, exceeded their orders as they were understood by the Carrancista representatives. The representatives of the American government refused to accept this explanation and contended that all of the evidence in their possession indicated clearly that the fight at Parral had been precipitated by the soldiers of the de facto government stationed there.

CIVILIANS FLEE FROM PERONNE

Capture of Town by the Allies Expected; Big Salient Long Held by Germans Now in Peril

London, Sept. 14.—The Serbian legation announced this afternoon that the entire Bulgarian first line in Greece had been taken by the Serbians and that a great battle was in progress.

By SIDNEY B. CAVE.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Sept. 14.—Capture of Peronne by French troops, a blow that will ultimately force the Germans to abandon the great Noyon salient that they have maintained since the battle of the Marne two years ago, was forecast by dispatches received here from Amsterdam today.

These state that though Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria was reinforcing his troops about Peronne and bringing up all available artillery for the town's defence, the civilian inhabitants of the district have been ordered by the Germans to leave at once.

Refugees numbering many thousand have already reached the Belgian town of Given. These war exiles report that signs of panic are already appearing among the German troops owing to the continued advance of the French troops on the Somme front. From them was obtained the first account of the results obtained by the French aviators in their recent raids behind the German lines.

The refugees stated that in every phase of aerial warfare the French fliers are now demonstrating their superiority, not only in numbers, but also in the boldness of their operations.

Several of the railway lines upon which the Germans depend for moving their troops rapidly to threatened points on the front have been so badly damaged by bombs dropped from French aeroplanes that it will take more than two weeks to repair them.

Eight German ammunition depots have been blown up with heavy loss of life.

The others sustained fatal injuries in jumping from the third floor to the pavement.

BIG LEAGUE LEADERS CLOSE

Games Today May Change Positions of Teams; Braves and Red Sox in Spirited Finish

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

A marked change can be made in both league races today should certain happenings result. For example, the Braves by winning while her immediate rivals, the Phillies, are losing can move into second place. And likewise the Tygers can step into American League leadership with a win if the Red Sox lose to St. Louis.

By virtue of their double victory yesterday while Brooklyn was dropping one game and Philadelphia splitting even the Braves gained substantially on their leaders. This morning the relative standings are:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Brooklyn	78	54	.591
Philadelphia	77	54	.588
Boston	75	54	.581

The figures reveal that Boston is hardly a game and a half behind

CLIMATOLOGICALLY SPEAKING

RAILS GREASED, NEW YORK CARS IN COLLISION

By L. V. B. RUCKER,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

New York, Sept. 14.—Eight persons were hurt, one seriously, in a series of collisions at Westchester and Brook avenue in the Bronx today when strike sympathizers greased the rails of the surface car line there.

The motormen were unable to stop their cars on the grade at this point owing to the grease. Traffic was tied up for some time.

Crowds jeered the car crews until dispersed by the police.

Rioting along the elevated and surface lines affected by the traction strike continued. During the early hours no serious violence occurred, but there were enough disturbances throughout the strike zone to keep the police on the jump.

As usual, the favorite method of attack was hurling missiles from roofs at passing elevated trains and dragging motormen and conductors from surface cars.

A Ninth avenue train was deluged with bricks and bottles as it sped past. One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street early today. A brick crashed through a car window, but nobody was injured.

From the roof of a tenement at Sixth avenue and Fiftieth street a fusillade of stones and bottles showered upon a train, smashing several windows. Another train was bombarded at Ninth avenue and Thirty-fourth street, but no one was hurt and no arrests made.

Reiterating their statement that the strike on the elevated and subway lines had been broken and the struggle on the surface lines would terminate within twenty-four hours in a complete defeat of the union, traction officials early in the day set about making their threat good.

In his pockets were found $8 in cash and a notebook, but nothing by which to identify him.

GERMANS UNABLE TO DISLODGE FRENCH

By CHARLES F. BERTELLI.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Sept. 14.—German troops launched a counter offensive on the Somme front yesterday, but it resulted in failure, the War Office announced today. The Teuton attacks were made on both sides of the Somme River, that to the north being against Hill No. 76, while to the south the Germans assailed the positions recently taken by the French.

The official communique reports the repulse of these assaults, the same fate meeting two German attacks on the Vaux-Chapitre positions on the Verdun front.

A feature of the military operations much commented on by the French experts is that the Allies not only gain their objective in the attacks they make, but hold their captured positions despite the most desperate efforts of the Germans to dislodge them.

In the latest Somme attacks the Germans buried large forces upon the French only to be driven back with heavy losses.

The official communique relative to the western front follows:

"North of the Somme we repulsed during the night several German attacks at the southern extremity of Hill No. 76. According to late reports the violent but unsuccessful counter attacks launched yesterday by the Germans in this region were led by a division hastily transported from the Verdun front.

"South of the Somme the enemy made, without success, several attacks at different points on our front. In the course of one of these attacks west of Chaulnes an enemy detachment, the size of a company, was almost totally annihilated.

"On the right bank of the Meuse (Verdun front) German attacks on our new positions at Vaux-Chapitre wood were easily repulsed.

"The night was quiet on the rest of the front."

Czar of Bulgaria Plays in Movie Drama

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 14.—The Daily News says:

"The Hamburger Nachrichten publishes an account of a four-act moving picture drama in which Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria himself played the part of the king. The hero is a Bulgarian peasant from Macedonia, falsely accused of the murder of a neighbor. The peasant flees to America and there becomes the manager of a large munitions factory.

"When the war begins the peasant refuses to make more munitions and escapes on a Swedish steamer which is captured by an Italian warship. He again escapes and is saved by a German U-boat.

"He finally reaches home and throws himself at the feet of Czar Ferdinand, is pardoned and enters the army. Suddenly he performs a number of heroic deeds and is decorated by the Czar.

"Of the Bulgarian Czar as a movie star, the Hamburg newspaper says:

"He plays wonderfully well. As he walks in the park, he is genuinely taken aback when suddenly the stranger throws himself at his feet. The Czar talks to him as if he really wanted to know the secrets of his heart and afterwards pins the decoration on his breast, shakes hands with him and salutes him most military. It is indeed a royal film."

"Involving of Rumania Shows Allies' Weakness"

By International News Service.

Vienna, via Berlin, Sept. 14.—Criticism of the government resulting from the participation of Rumania in the war on the side of the entente was answered defiantly today by Baron Burian, Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs.

"I would welcome an investigation of the Rumanian situation," was the answer he made to his critics.

The baron declared that the central powers would have been humiliated if they had offered territorial concessions in order to hold Rumania's friendship.

"I believe that the entente powers showed weakness rather than strength by involving Rumania in the war," he continued. "If the enemy powers had been strong they would not have thought the assistance of Rumania necessary. Rumania will be quickly dealt with after it has been crushed."

PUNISH BELGIANS FOR BRITON'S FLIGHT

By International News Service.

Amsterdam, Sept. 14.—Following the flight of a British aviator over Brussels, the Germans punished the inhabitants of that city by ordering that they must be within their homes by 7 p. m. and by closing the cafes within a certain area. It is alleged that the people signalled to the airman and that crowds joined in a demonstration of anti-German feeling.

WAR SUMMARY

The fighting on the Somme reached the counter-attack stage again today. The counter-attacks were fruitless, however.

The gains reported by the French today were the most important they have made since the beginning of their Somme offensive, for by the capture of Bouchavesnes they come fairly astride the road from Peronne to Bapaume, the most important line of communication in this section of the front.

The allied strategists hope that this success will mean a quicker yielding of the German lines south of Peronne; that the Noyon salient to the southward toward Paris will slowly withdraw into itself. Unless this happens, the allies must face the necessity of winning back France and Belgium by piecemeal—an enormous task.

There is a point in the Somme situation that must be considered. The original battle line ran substantially north and south. North of Thiepval the line still stands as it was originally. But at Thiepval it turns at a right angle to the eastward and runs almost due east for seven miles.

A German counter-stroke at Thiepval, aimed to the southwest and sufficiently powerful to crush in the British lines there, would bring confusion to the whole allied force within the newly-formed salient. The reward of success would be so great that if the Germans can muster the necessary strength it seems inevitable that they should attempt the stroke.

The line from Thiepval to Bazentin seems destined to be the scene of hard fighting soon, either under German attacks or British efforts to strengthen the position there.

Save on the Somme front, the battle lines were everywhere quiet yesterday and today. In Transylvania the Austrians continued their withdrawal without waiting to be attacked. In the Dobrudja the Teuton-Bulgar forces continued their slow advance without meeting any very vigorous resistance. North of Salonica there was no hard fighting. Verdun saw its usual life and death struggles, with no decision. Russian attacks on their front were fruitless.

Greece has its new Cabinet, and its adhesion to the allied cause is predicted by the allies for today.

GERMAN TROOPS GET BELGIAN FOOD

London, Sept. 14.—German soldiers are seizing stores accumulated in Belgium by the American Relief Commission and paid for by Americans, who thought they were feeding the starving Belgians, according to the Copenhagen correspondent of the Times, who quotes the Ribe Stiftstidende as saying:

"Not only do German troops going from Belgium to the trenches on the western front have their rations eked out by these supplies, but soldiers going home on furlough arrive with these purloined victuals."

MILLIKEN FACES 'MOVIE' MEN HERE

Governor-elect Carl E. Milliken of Island Falls, Me., has left Boston for Maine after having faced numerous "movie" machines and plain cameras attended a Baptist board meeting and granted many interviews, during which he declared that he stands for the enforcement of the liquor law in Maine.

MASSACRE OF GREEKS CHARGED

Athens, Sept. 11.—The capture of the entire Greek division by the Bulgars at Kavala and the massacre of the inhabitants of the town by Turks and Bulgars is reported from Saloniki.

It is also announced that British and Russian warships bombarded the heights and Greek forts at Kavala occupied by the Bulgarians.

It is known that rioting had broken out at Kavala, the Greek populace protesting against occupation of the city by the Bulgars. Several business establishments were pillaged.

A heavy guard was placed about buildings owned by American Tobacco interests and containing stores valued at several million dollars. It is reported that several persons were killed in the riots, but whether the Americans were attacked for protecting their property is not yet known.

Plans for the formation of a coalition ministry with ex-Premier Zaimis at its head, collapsed today and King Constantine again summoned M. Dimitrakopoulos. The latter asked for forty-eight hours in which to canvass the situation and decide whether it was possible for him to accept the post of premier.

Rumanians Hold Their Own About Silistria.

By International News Service.

Petrograd, Sept. 14.—Rumanian troops are engaged in battle on the Danube with German and Bulgarian forces, the Russian War Office announced today. The fighting is in progress in the region of Silistria, and thus far has favored the Rumanians, who captured eight light guns.

"On the Western front of the Russian armies the situation is unchanged. In the Caucasus, as a result of engagements in the region of Hamadan, we captured a herd of cattle and camels.

"On the Balkan front, in the region of Silistria, fighting is proceeding on the Danube. The Rumanians repelled the attacks of the Germans and Bulgarians and captured eight light guns."

Gains for British North of Ginchy

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 14.—Today's War Office report on the Somme operations says that British troops have made progress north of Ginchy, but that the general situation is unchanged.

The statement follows:

"The situation is unchanged. Artillery duels are in progress south of the Ancre. Hostile artillery is particularly active in the neighborhood of the Foseres windmill. South of Thiepval we made further progress. North of Ginchy and in the neighborhood of Souches we made some night raids, taking some prisoners."

AIR RAID ON ITALIAN DEPOT

By International News Service.

Vienna, via Berlin, Sept. 14.—The Austro-Hungarian Admiralty today issued the following:

"An Austro-Hungarian squadron of naval planes on the night of September 12-13 bombed the railroad station and military positions at Cervignano (an Italian military depot). Two large conflagrations broke out and a violent explosion was heard at this point. The railroad station was hit several times.

"Another squadron of naval planes attacked on the same night the naval harbor of Venice. Heavy bombs were dropped successfully on the arsenal on the docks, near the gasometers, on Fort Alberone, and in the ship building yards at Chioggia.

"At Chioggia several conflagrations were seen.

"Both squadrons returned unharmed in spite of being violently shelled."

Gains for Allies Against Bulgars

By International News Service.

Paris, Sept. 14.—Continuing their joint offensive on the allies' left wing the Serbian and French troops have won further successes over the Bulgarians, according to an official report on the Salonica operations issued by the War Office today.

The Serbians, it states, maintain their progress west of the Vardar. They have captured a height west of Hill No. 1,580. The fighting in this district is still in progress.

South of Lake Ostrovo the French are assailing the Bulgars, the advantage lying with the attacking troops.

The official report on the Salonica operations follows:

"Army of the Orient—From the Struma to the Vardar there was an intermittent cannonade without any infantry action other than patrol engagements at different points on the front.

"West of the Vardar Serbian troops continued their advance. They captured at the point of the bayonet Bulgarian entrenchments between Kovil and Vetrenik and progressed appreciably toward Kalmakalan.

"Northwest of Lake Ostrovo, after a bitter conflict, which resulted in very heavy losses for the enemy, the Serbians captured a height west of Hill No. 1,506. Their advanced guard forces have reached the first slope of Malkian Nadse.

"Fighting continues to our advantage in the region south of Lake Ostrovo.

"An enemy aeroplane was brought down by one of ours near Pardovici."

Frenchman Urges Sale of Louvre Paintings to U. S.

By International News Service.

Paris, Sept. 14.—New York bids fair to become the home of many of the masterpieces now hanging in the Louvre and Luxembourg museums. The sale of these gems in the world of art was proposed today by Urbain Gohier in order to restore France's trade balance with America.

"America has become a formidable industrial power," he said. "She is heaping up prodigious wealth—gold or credits—which she will use after the war to play a great role in the world's affairs.

"France can recover a portion of her specie by selling America what she wants of our masterpieces. We have long sold Americans fakes and worthless paintings. Let us now sell her works of art certified by our museum directors. We possess an enormous surplus of old masters and moderns. Let us thin out the Louvre and Luxembourg collections for America's benefit and make room for the continuous stream of works we are always acquiring."

GERMANS RUSH MEN EAST

By International News Service.

Amsterdam, Sept. 14.—Large numbers of the German troops stationed in Belgium are being returned to the eastern front. All passenger service on the German railroads has been held up for two days to facilitate the eastern movement.

The German troops stationed in Belgium are reserves, consisting of men hitherto regarded as too old for continued active service. That they had been sent to the eastern theatre indicates the Russian pressure is becoming most severe.

VICTORY IS SURE, SAYS BRIAND

By CHARLES F. BERTELLI,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Sept. 14.—Premier Briand today delivered before the French Chamber of Deputies his anxiously awaited speech reviewing the war and aroused tumultuous cheers when he predicted a complete victory for the Allies and the overthrow of the Central Powers.

The Premier declared that the complete unity in the Allies' aims and operations had assured a final Teutonic defeat and a lasting peace.

"After Turkey," said the Premier, "Bulgaria will realize that it is dangerous for a country to desert her traditional friendships in order to subordinate herself to the sinister schemes of an unscrupulous nation.

"The invasion of Greek Macedonia encountered no serious resistance from Greece. The behavior in this country of agents of German corruption and espionage led the allies to take or demand measures indispensible to the security of the forces.

"The Zaimis government, to whose loyalty is just to pay homage, accorded the first satisfaction desired. 'We called to Salonica to contribute to the defense of Serbia, Greece's ally. We shall pursue to the end the task for which she asked our help.

HELP FOR GREECE.

"Intervening in this manner, we have not intended solely to safe-guard our troops. We also had Greece's own interests in view. We, in the end, furnish the Greek people indispensible help to preserve her independence, which is menaced by the greed of our enemies, who are also hers.

"During the parliamentary recess Italy declared war on Germany and Rumania against Austria-Hungary. France welcomes these new with joyful feeling. "Because of numerous vexations and in order to show complete solidarity, with the allies engaged in the same war against the same enemies, Italy declared war on Germany. Thus unity on a single front can be more closely applied.

"Rumania had long aspired to release her oppressed people (in Transylvania). Rumania's treacherous attack against her may increase her difficulties, but in her own strength and that of her allies she will find means to overcome them, and with the allies march towards victory that will make her the great nation she has a legitimate ambition to become.

THWART TEUTON DREAMS.

"The Salonica armies will fulfill the mission entrusted to them. Already on this front, as on all others, the action is developing according to the staff's plan. In this theatre, the operations of the allies thwarting the Central Empires' eastern dreams will develop in accordance with the situation and events will follow the inexorable course in the Balkan peninsula."

Premier Briand summed up the general situation as follows:

"The war's developments in the different theatres of operations shows that the allies henceforth will hold an ascendency over the enemy, which sustained co-ordination on their part can only accentuate. At present this co-ordination has reached a point where it is producing results which enable to contemplate the future with absolute confidence.

"The striking blows of the glorious Russian and Italian armies and those of the magnificent English and French soldiers fighting on our front have given us the right to cherish all hopes.

"The hour of reparation is approaching, not only for the individuals, but also for the people on whom German aggression fell."

Reprimand for Officer as Men Are Discharged

Judge Day in the South Boston Court today reprimanded Special Officer Follansbee of the New Haven for arresting four New Haven employes who were on their way to work.

Follansbee arrested them on the charge of walking on the New Haven tracks. The men, Thomas Joyce, Patrick Brick and Michael and John Hayes testified that they were employed by the road and were on their way to work.

When they told Follansbee this Joyce testified, Follansbee clubbed Joyce and inflicted a wound that required several stitches.

Follansbee sought to have the men booked on a drunkenness charge. Lieutenant Manning refused to book them on that charge, but Judge Day at Follansbee's request signed the complaint charging them with having been found the men not guilty and ordered their discharge.

TO WED AT "GRETNA GREEN"

Miss Ernestine M. Hunt, the attractive daughter of Dr. William O. Hunt of Newtonville, who came into the limelight last April when she was suspended from Wellesley College with two others for staying away from their dormitories without leave, again surprised society circles of Newton when she filed wedding intentions at Brattleboro, Vt., to secretly wed Richard W. Cotton, also of Newtonville and a student at Norwich University.

Society is disappointed at the latest action of this vivacious young woman. A church wedding was expected in the early Fall, and the news that the young couple had intended to receive their friends by marrying quietly came as a surprise even to the parents of both.

SECRET COMES OUT.

A prying reporter in Brattleboro was the real reason for letting the cat out of the bag. He discovered the marriage intention in Brattleboro City Hall and telephoned the facts to Boston. Today Dr. Hunt declared that he was taken completely by surprise at the news.

"I knew they were going to marry soon," he said. "We were going to send announcement cards out within a few weeks. I guess we will have to send them out sooner. Mr. Cotton is a likeable young man, and I welcome him as a son-in-law."

The real story of the attempted run-a-way marriage was told today by the bridegroom, who lives at 29 Dexter avenue, Newtonville. He is the son of C. A. Cotton, a Boston business man. He said:

"I told our parents that I was going to Brattleboro to visit a college chum, before going back to school, but instead I filed the intention. I am sorry that the secret has become known because we wished to avoid the fuss of a big wedding.

TO LIVE IN NEW YORK.

"Our plans are made. We shall live in New York, and instead of going back to the university I shall accept a position on the Dramatic Mirror, in New York. You know I have written several plays at school, besides writing more or less for the local papers."

Miss Hunt figured in the news last April, when she remonstrated against the treatment she received at Wellesley College. With two other girls she went horseback riding at night without permission. The Student Government Association recommended that all the girls be suspended, and as a result Miss Hunt was compelled to leave the institution.

She protested against this treatment, saying that the whole thing was nothing more than a "silly little lark."

Miss Hunt is twenty-two and her intended husband is the same age.

SAYS FARMERS ESCAPE THE LAW

President Everett O. Colby of the New England Milk Producers' Association today declared that United States District Attorney George W. Anderson must have been misquoted in the interview in which he said he would investigate the vote of the producers to raise the price of milk to fifty cents a can.

"I am astonished," said President Colby. "For I understand that farmers and laboring men are specifically exempted from the provisions of the Sherman law prohibiting combinations to raise prices.

"If any law forbids a dairyman from making a living, we must get busy right away to repeal it. No dairyman is making a profit on his dairy today. The raise in price on their end is necessary, but perhaps some saving in the delivery processes in the city can prevent the raise here."

Says John Bridge, Not John Harvard, Founded College

Who founded Harvard College?

This is the question that has been raised by Miss Helen Bridge Andrews, whose denied engagement has recently attracted much attention.

If the matter were left to popular vote, there's little doubt that John Harvard would be given credit. But Miss Andrews says the man to whom credit should be given is John Bridge one of her ancestors.

John Harvard, in her opinion has been receiving credit all these years that doesn't properly belong to him. She admits that he gave the college a few books and some money, for which gifts the college was named for him.

The official version as given by the university is that "Harvard College was founded in 1636 by a vote passed at an adjourned meeting of the General Court of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay which convened September 8 of that year.

"In 1638 John Harvard, a non-conforming clergyman of England, who had been in the colony one year, died at Charlestown, leaving half of his whole property and his entire library (about 300 volumes) to the institution. The value of this bequest was more than double the sentiment originally voted by the court, and it was resolved to open the college at once and to give it the name of Harvard."

STATE ACTS TO CHECK PLAGUE

The state's executive and legislative machinery ground out special legislation in a hurry today to meet the emergencies of the infantile paralysis epidemic.

Governor McCall sent a special message asking for enactment of law giving boards of health power to establish quarantines to check the spread of the disease. The message was referred to the Committee on Public Health, which went into quick session to draft a bill in reply to the message.

GIVES BOARDS POWER.

In the upper branch Senator Clark reported a bill for this committee. This bill was passed under suspension of the rules and went across to the House, where similar action was scheduled, so that it could be sent up to the Governor for signature without delay.

The bill gives power to all local health authorities to adopt such rules and regulations, including quarantine, as may be necessary to check the spread of infantile paralysis.

Authority is given the State Department of Health to revoke or revise any of the local rules or regulations found to be unnecessary or unreasonable.

Regulations adopted under this act will expire January 15 next.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Governor McCall's message was in part:

"I think that as an emergency measure, to aid in checking the spread of infantile paralysis, the powers of boards of health, if not now adequate, should be enlarged until such time as the danger of an epidemic during the present year shall have passed or until the next Legislature shall have had an opportunity to study more carefully and pass upon the subject in question. I personally commend the passage of legislation to that end.

Thirty-two cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the State health authorities in the twenty-four hours ending at 5 o'clock today.

These included seven Boston cases, one in Conway, three in Cambridge and one in Malden.

The cases today increased the total for the month to 220. The total for August was 253 and for July was 107. September, with half the month gone, bids fair to equal the combined total of the two preceding months.

In Winchester today, where the schools opened last week, and where 50 per cent of the grammar school pupils and 90 per cent of the high school grades are attending classes, parents circulated petitions asking that the schools be closed because of the handicap imposed on those not attending school.

The School Committee replied that the schools would be kept open.

POSTPONE OPENING.

The opening of the Lexington grammar schools have once again been postponed to September 25. They were scheduled to open on next Monday, but one case of infantile paralysis caused their postponement.

The list of cases in which names were issued by the State health authorities today was as follows:

Dorchester Boy Is Drowned Trying to Save Sister's Shoe

Louis Kreiger, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Kreiger of No. 9 Lorne street, Dorchester, was drowned in Scarboro pond, Franklin Park, while trying to rescue a shoe belonging to his seven-year-old sister, Rosie. The boy's attempt was made in the hope of saving the little girl from a possible scolding at home.

The children went to Franklin Park with their ten-year-old brother Philip and an eight-year-old friend, Phillip Bearson, the dead boy's chum.

The three boys sallied a few feet out into the shore of the pond, and little Rosie decided to go wading. So she took off her shoes and stockings. A few minutes later, spotting a "crab" for the two boys, Phillip Bearson fetched one of the little girl's shoes and tied it on the boat.

The shoe rolled off, sinking to the bottom.

As more little Louis sprang to the issue, he waded out after the shoe, ignorant of the fact that the shelving shore dropped four or five feet deep. Just as he was about to grasp the shoe, he slipped over the edge of the bank into deep water and sank.

Wailing only a moment to see Louis Kreiger, eight-year-old brother of the boy who had gone down, Phillip Bearson ran to his home, half a mile away, for help. There he informed his mother of what had happened. Meanwhile Philip Bearson and little Rosie Lott watch at the pond.

Bernard Connolly, foreman of the recreation department of the park, was told of the accident and, attaching a rope about his waist, brought the body to the surface on the fourth trial. All the children declare there was no life preserver near.

advertised a public warning about coffee in its early days as a beverage in England. It said:

"You are not to drink it after supper unless you intend to be watchful, for it will hinder sleep for three or four hours."

That was 250 years ago. Today it is a well-known fact that sleeplessness, brought on by coffee drinking, is due to the presence of the drug, caffeine, in coffee. It is also known that coffee drinking is a common cause of various other ills.

"There's a Reason"

DEFEAT OF WAR RELIEF BILL IS CONDEMNED BY SHERBURNE

Colonel John W. Sherburne of the Massachusetts Field Artillery, who arrived from the Mexican border today to advise with the Legislature on "war relief" measures, sharply criticised the House of Representatives for defeating the bill to pay the salaries of State employes who were called away for military duty.

"It is a shame," said Colonel Sherburne, who himself is a member of the Legislature from Brookline.

"Private corporations like the General Electric Company, the Boston Elevated and many others, are paying the salaries of their employes, and the State should lead the way in this duty."

Colonel Sherburne delivered his blunt attack in the presence of Chairman Warner of the House Ways and Means Committee just after he had left a conference with Governor McCall in the executive chamber.

"The public employes have places to go when they come back, and we think we have done enough," said Warner.

"I don't think you have done enough for the soldiers, and I know that the moral effect of it will be very bad," retorted Colonel Sherburne, who has the reputation of being one of the most efficient militia officers in the country.

FAST TRIP FROM BORDER.

Colonel Sherburne arrived in Boston this morning after a hurried trip from the border. His train was sidetracked "somewhere in New Mexico" by a passing train and the observation car was thrown off the tracks, Colonel Sherburne, who had a berth in the second car ahead, felt the shock, but was not injured. His train was thirteen hours late.

"I came up to see that the boys get a square deal," he said, with a knowing smile, as he left the Governor's chamber.

"The State should go the limit in providing help for the dependent families. The soldiers should also be allowed reasonable compensation in addition to the federal pay.

"I am also anxious that there should be no lagging in the absentee voting. The names of the soldiers who are eligible to vote should be sent back from the border to the local election officials to be certified."

CALLED AN OUTRAGE.

Colonel Sherburne was told that the bill provides for a commission to supervise the voting by the militia troops.

"That's all right," he said; "that is not a junket."

Colonel Sherburne, in dispatches from the front, had characterized the trip of the militia officers from Massachusetts to procure the names of the State troops as a "junket."

"Quote me again as saying it's a junket," he said. "It's an outrage. They came down there and asked me to take away five of my men from guard duty every day to prepare the lists for them, when they had the lists in the Adjutant-General's office downstairs."

Adjutant-General Pearson, who was the object of this criticism, was in one of the chambers waiting to see the Governor when Colonel Sherburne left the executive rooms, but they did not see each other.

"We men at the front don't want the State to send the extra $18 a month down to them," said Colonel Sherburne. "They are worried about their families, and they want the money to be distributed directly to their families from the State."

Defeat Bill Giving $50 to Dependents

After a brief legislative battle, the Martin bill to increase the State aid for Bay State soldiers to $50 a month was defeated by the House of Representatives today, 82 to 71.

Meanwhile both branches were rushing to their final stages the bills allowing the soldiers an extra compensation of $10 a month and allowing a maximum of $30 a month for dependent families.

"Massachusetts has sent more troops to the border, proportionately than any other State," said Representative Martin of Hyde Park.

"None of the brave whose faces have been familiar on the Common have gone. It is the brain and brawn of the State which has gone down to Mexico. Many of them gave up lucrative salaries to serve their country, and they should be reimbursed."

Representative Giblin of East Boston, who has a son at the front, said that the Bay State men are "starving."

A moment later, Col Sherburne, who just arrived from the border, told the House that the men were "well fed, well clothed and happy."

Both branches enacted and sent to Governor McCall the resolve appropriating $10,000 for the home transportation of soldiers from the border.

They also enacted the special primary bills intended to relieve the situation caused by the Suffolk county apportionment fight in the courts.

Dwyer on Way to Rome to Enter Religious Order

Michael J. Dwyer, one of Boston's best known men, is on his way to Rome to begin a course of study preparatory to entering a Catholic religious order.

Mr. Dwyer is a former assistant district attorney of Suffolk county and a trial lawyer of marked ability, but he is even more widely known as a lecturer and as a concert singer.

Mr. Dwyer is a widower. His only child, Miss Florence Dwyer, is accompanying her father as far as London. There she will bid him farewell and return to Boston, while her father continues on to Rome and his chosen purpose.

It is said that as a young man, Mr. Dwyer had thoughts of the priesthood. But he went into law instead. He married and became a man of family and professional affairs. But he has always had deep religious interest and has been an eager and earnest student of church matters.

Following mercantile work, Mr. Dwyer was a newspaper reporter, then editor of Donahue's Magazine, was admitted to the bar in 1906, and won his first case a month later. He was appointed indictment clerk in the district attorney's office, became second assistant in former District Attorney Sughrue, first assistant under Arthur D. Hill and Joseph C. Pelletier. His prosecution and conviction of Cardenio F. King was one of his most famous cases.

MONEY GOES TO CREDITORS OF HOTEL

The Licensing Board gave out a decision today that the creditors of the Crawford House and not Joseph A. Gahm, one of the former proprietors, were entitled to the proceeds from the sale of the hotel liquor license.

Gahm claimed the proceeds on the ground that in 1912 he advanced money to the bankruptcy trustee of George H. Rimbach to make an arrangement with creditors whereby a new license was issued to Gahm and Rimbach, with Rimbach conducting the business.

The Licensing Board found that in 1914 Charles H. Rimbach took over the debts and business on the understanding that he was to apply for license at the new license year. But soon after this arrangement Charles Rimbach went into bankruptcy, and the debts of the business were proved against his estate.

The board ruled that the proceeds of the license should go to the creditors of the business as under the Crawford House name, no matter who actually conducted the business.

VOTERS HALT "COME BACK" OF LORIMER

By International News Service.

Chicago, Sept. 14—Governor E. F. Dunne, Democrat, and W. O. Lowden, Republican, will make the race for the governorship of Illinois this Fall. They won at yesterday's primaries. William Lorimer, former U. S. Senator, made his widely-heralded attempt to "come back" in the political game in the Sixth District as a congressional nominee, but he was defeated by a large majority. The men whom he ruled in the days of his power defeated him.

W. E. Mason, another former Senator, was nominated for the lower house. "Joe" Cannon won again.

J. R. Mann, Republican leader of the House, was renominated, and George Foss, a brother of Eugene of the Bay State, again won a congressional nomination. Medill McCormick was nominated for Congress by the Republicans.

MARSHALL WINS PRAISE BY HIKE

By BERT FORD.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 14—Every man in the Second Massachusetts Brigade feels proud of the excellent showing made in the hike and inspection for the benefit of officers detailed by General Funston, who is expected to come Monday and pay his respects in person.

There was not a hitch during the ten-mile march. The soldierly bearing of the Bay State boys won praise from the line. Colonel Logan's regiment had the right of line and it fell to the lot of Captain James F. Hickey of Company of the Ninth, from Natick, to set the pace for the 4,120 men that turned out.

Captain Hickey campaigned in Cuba and the Philippines and he brought the column over the road with a snap that delighted General Sweetser. The pace averaged nine minutes for every half-mile though some were covered in eight minutes.

HITS MADE ON RECALL.

Captain Hugh Maguire, quartermaster of the Ninth, was in command of the supply trains of the three regiments and Lieutenant William Drohan had charge of the Ninth's supply wagons. There were sixty-eight supply wagons and more than 300 mules.

Although the officers of the Massachusetts Brigade think that the inspection is the forerunner of a movement of the Bay State troops homeward within ten days, the regulars think differently. Heavy wagers are being placed in all the Massachusetts units as to when the recall will come from Washington.

The artillerymen are holding pistol practice these days on Government Hill in range. They fire at stationary and bobbing targets. "Ben" Harwood of Battery A is said to be the best pistol shot of that outfit and "Ted" Storer is next best. George Parker and "Bob" Luscomb are considered the best riders, and Douglas Lawson and Lawrence Page are the crack horsemen of headquarters company.

O'BRIEN GETS FURLOUGH.

Lieutenant Kred W. O'Brien of No. 1 Ambulance Company has obtained permission to take a ten-day furlough, beginning September 24, to attend the convention of the Roentgen Ray Society in Chicago.

Sergeant W. J. Jordan of Company B of the Eighth, and Sergeant K. L. Childs of the Fifth Headquarters Company, have been discharged because of dependents.

Interest has been stirred by a request from Governor Bell to report the sharpshooters in the infantry regiments.

Private Healey of the Supply Company of the Fifth Regiment, suffered a broken arm during the hike and is at the Base Hospital.

C Company of the Eighth of Cambridge, has a clothes washing machine and wringer. The apparatus is used by the occupants of two tents daily. It is a big success, judging from the decorated clothes lines.

Fall shopping guide—

HATS The main thing to keep in mind is that hats are simple—so simple they take an artist to make. Velvet is the one most wanted material, and already it is scarce in the wanted grades and colors. What a good opportunity to say we have plenty!

Many colors—Here is a list according to their importance: purple, taupe, gold, silver, Burgundy, Hessian blue, flag blue, midnight blue, rose des alpes, cherry red, brown, black—all sizes. (Sixth Floor.)

SUITS Soft wool velours is the most wanted material—whether one pays $25 or $225. The fur-trimmed suit is the favorite—the favorite furs are the short-haired kinds, especially muskrat and Hudson seal.

Suit-coats are longer, to be sure—so much longer that some can be worn as separate coats. But short coats are good also; that is to say, coats that come to the finger tips or within an inch or two. Suit collars are generally the big, convertible sailor type. Women want colored suits—Burgundy, purple, brown, taupe, green, and after them blue and black. (Fifth Floor.)

BLOUSES First comes Georgette crepe in the new suit colors or in white and pink; then crepe de chine, plaids and stripes, and laces.

The coat waist with a peplum that is worn outside the skirt keeps coming over from Paris in new versions. It is one of the best of the new ideas. (Fifth Floor.)

COATS Bolivia cloth is supreme as far as coats are concerned. Silk plushes are coming, velours are very, very good and, we may add, exceedingly practical. Mixtures and broadcloth hold their own.

Colored coats are the rule—Burgundy, taupe, brown, green, purple, with blue and black as after thoughts.

Coats are mostly of the motor-coat type—long, loose, full—Coats were certainly the Ugly Duckling of the garment family, but they are beautiful enough this season to compensate for any past ugliness. (Fifth Floor.)

DRESSES Serge dresses dominate—in fact, most of the designing genius has been expended on serge dresses. The smartest styles, the leading styles, the most elaborate styles are practically all in serge.

For other materials, there is wool jersey for the street, satin and charmeuse for afternoon and taffeta for evening parties.

The dress silhouette is distinctive—the waistline is not of any account, it may be high, low, natural, or there may be none at all. The weight hangs from the shoulders, and the line from shoulder to hem is approximately straight. (Sixth Floor.)

SKIRTS Skirts are still short—not horribly short, you know, but short. Nevertheless there is a conspiracy afoot to lengthen them.

We hope women will continue to hold out against the long skirt, because the short one is so becoming and sensible. (Fifth Floor.)

CORSETS The Fall corsets are built to make women look normal. There is no exaggeration in any direction—the back is straight, the front is straight, the bust is normal, the waist keeps its natural slight curve. (Third Floor.)

COLOR A woman can buy everything in the prominent new colors.—Burgundy, taupe and purple—her hats, petticoats, suits, coats and blouses and what not.

SWEATERS For Fall sweater fashions—plaid sweaters, middy sweaters that go over the head, fur trimmed silk sweaters and Shetland sweaters, with Angora collars and cuffs.

SOLONS CLAMOR FOR SALARY GRAB

The legislators who were called into the special session to provide relief for Bay State troops and dependant families wrangled today over the pay and expenses money to be given them for attending its session.

They want $100 and expense money for their three-days' work.

Chairman Warner of the Ways and means Committee, which doles out appropriations, frankly admitted today that the situation "is unpleasant, to say the least."

"They are calling me a 'tightwad' and other names," said Warner.

Chairman Warner conferred on the matter this morning with Senate Chairman Gordon of Springfield. They said later they were undecided whether to allow the members five dollars or ten dollars a day along with their expenses.

"I would be glad to pay my own expenses and serve without pay," Warner said, "but, of course, some of the men gave up their work and traveled long distances.

U. S. INQUIRY IN ATTACKS ON GERARD

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 14. — Official action of Secretary of State Lansing will be taken to learn the cause of the continuous criticism by German newspapers of Ambassador Gerard in Berlin. State Department officials stated today.

With the Ambassador again charged with having made improper statements, concerning the German's government's submarine policy, Secretary Lansing is determined to find out the cause.

When an explanation is forthcoming from Ambassador Gerard a memorandum is expected to be sent to the German government as an intimation that further criticism of the American Ambassador is very undesirable, inasmuch as under the present censorship rules no German newspaper is permitted to publish any article not approved of by German government officials.

MISS ROSE SALTONSTALL PEABODY of Groton, who is to wed Dr. William Barclay Parsons of New York.

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Rose Saltonstall Peabody of Groton and Dr. William Barclay Parsons of New York so soon after the return of each from war-torn Europe raised the question through Boston society today whether the romance was not aided by foreign affairs.

Miss Peabody went to Europe some months ago to do war relief work. She returned recently. Dr. Parsons, who has been connected with the Presbyterian Hospital in New York city, went abroad last June and returned only yesterday. It was said that Dr. Parsons' trip abroad was due to professional interest in war hospitals. But the announcement of the engagement immediately upon the young physician's return and soon after the return of Miss Peabody has caused speculation whether her war relief duties and his hospital studies did not have a tinge of romance.

Miss Peabody comes from one of New England's most prominent families. She is one of four daughters of the Rev. Endicott Peabody, D. D., and Mrs. Peabody. Her father is the noted headmaster of Groton School, a position he has held since 1884. Her mother was Miss Fannie Peabody, daughter of an old Danvers family. Miss Peabody is well-known in Boston society, and has many friends as well in Manhattan.

Dr. Parsons is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Barclay Parsons of New York. His father is a widely known civil engineer. Dr. Parsons was graduated from Harvard in 1910, is a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club of this city, but is located in New York.

REPORT VILLA AT GUERRERO

Field Headquarters American Punitive Expedition, via Radio to Columbus, N. M., Sept. 14.—Pancho Villa and a band of outlaws are at Guerrero, according to unconfirmed reports which have reached General Pershing's headquarters within the past few hours.

It was at Guerrero that Villa was whipped by Colonel Dodd early in the life of the expedition, and it was there he sustained the wound that crippled him.

MAINE TEACHER IN MIDNIGHT MARRIAGE

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 14.—Miss Clarice P. Hancock of South Berwick and Nelson E. Ramsdell of Wells, Me., were married at Kittery, Me., at 12.05 this morning, after they had made many attempts to defy fate and be married the thirteenth of the month.

Accompanied by a wedding party of twenty guests, they arrived in this city early last evening and went at once to the home of the Rev. Percy W. Caswell, pastor of the Court Street Christian Church. The preliminaries were completed and the would-be bride and groom lined up in proper formation, when the minister looked at the license.

He found it was issued September 9 and told the visitors he could not marry them until the next day, when the five days required by law would have expired. They explained that they thought the five-day law was not necessary in New Hampshire, but to no avail.

Back to Maine they went, with the bridal party, all in automobiles. There the services of the Rev. William M. Forgrave were enlisted. He, too, looked at the license and said he could not marry them.

Back to Portsmouth again came the party, where a big supper was served at the leading hotel. At 12 o'clock the cars dashed again across the bridge to Kittery, and there at five minutes past the hour Mr. Forgrave performed the ceremony.

The bride is a school teacher at Eliot, Me., and is remarkably pretty.

Tilton, N. H., Sept. 14.—Wilbur Moulton of Tilton claims to be the champion corn grower of New Hampshire. Mr. Moulton has several acres of land, on which he raises his prize corn, some of which has already reached a height of 17 feet by actual measurement.

Maine Woman Seeks Property She Shared With Brookline Man

Miss Helen B. Andrews of Cape Elizabeth, Me., whose engagement to Horace Crosley Weston of No. 29 Kent street, Brookline, was denied by him in a statement made in the Boston papers after Miss Andrews had caused the announcement of it to be published, will take steps to be made the sole owner of property which she had Weston made a joint owner of with her, also to recover other articles which she claims to have given him in anticipation of their coming marriage which was scheduled to take place in October.

Miss Andrews, who is 42 years old is a daughter of the late Major-General George Leonard Andrews, for whom Fort Andrews was named, and who was for twenty-two years an instructor of modern languages at the United States Military Academy at West Point.

PELICAN PINES FOR NAME; TRY IT

Give a name to the bird which is now without any. The keeper who feeds his feathered pets large and small each day would like to learn the wise old fowls to come at call, but how can he call without any name?

Send in three names on a postal, and the girl or boy, man or woman, who hits upon the name which pleases the director of the Zoo will have the honor of seeing his suggestion placed on a card by the cage.

"See How Well My Boy Is"

the surface barns, they sent out the cars at frequent intervals, all under police guard. Men who had been held in reserve as strike-breakers were discharged as a result of warning that the city authorities would not permit the operation of cars by inexperienced crews.

By 8 a. m. 144 surface cars were in operation. The entire front of each car was protected by heavy wire netting to stop any missiles that might be thrown by rioters.

Two additional trains of eight cars, making a total of 104 trains being used, were placed in operation in the subway during the rush hours. There was enormous congestion on both the elevated and subway lines, but the traction chiefs asserted that the normal schedule was being maintained.

Early in the day the strikers began to gather at the Labor Lyceum for their parade to Union Square, where President Samuel Gompers of the A. F. of L. and Organizer William B. Fitzgerald of the Carmen's Union were scheduled to make addresses.

DEMAND OWNERSHIP.

"The only permanent solution of the transit situation fair to the public, fair to the employes and fair to the stockholders is municipal ownership and operation, the lines to be acquired at the value given by the companies to their holdings. No honest stockholder would ask for any dividend on value he had not created."

This is a part of a communication sent to Chairman Straus of the Public Service Commission by Frederic C. Leubuscher, chairman of the executive committee of the League for Municipal Ownership and Operation in New York.

"The people of New York city," he said, "through their representatives in the transit situation. That the people will have to meet the increased cost is no reason why we should refuse to pay a living wage.

Jr., thirteen, was in the cabin, and Thomas and Jimmie were also aboard.

They were bound for Long Island, and they had their lunches along and planned to spend the day.

They were a gay party, and the returning Nantasket boat passed them and saw them waving their hands and shouting a good-natured greeting.

Off Governor's Island they passed the Yarmouth liner Prince George. They waved their hats and yelled their hails to the passengers along her deck.

Then the big liner's wash caught them. The frail craft climbed into the heavily laden little boat and stalled the engine. Angelo Brengora yelled to the others to bail the water out. The boys and the men grabbed their hats and baled like mad, while Angelo tried to start the engine again.

But another wave caught them, and another, and their launch lastly filled and turned slowly over, bottom up.

The accident occurred near where one of the dredges was at work. The shouts of the men and boys attracted the attention of the dredge crew, but they had no boat in which to come to the rescue.

They blew a distress signal on their whistle, however, and the city boats Watchman and George A. Hibbard, and the tug Nellie answered.

The three craft rushed toward where the overturned launch was drifting, and they dropped boats overboard and rescued those in the water.

Eight of the thirteen were all right save for a wetting. Three others were in bad state. One of them, little Jimmie Brengola, had been kept afloat in the water by Angelo Carnotta of No. 11 Lovejoy street.

The rescuing boats brought the boys and men to Calvin's wharf, East Boston, and phoned the East Boston Relief Hospital.

TEN WIN FIGHT FOR TAX ABATEMENTS

Ten owners of property in Cambridgeport win a tax fight with the 1915 assessors of Cambridge involving more than one-third of a million dollars' valuation.

The Middlesex County Commissioners announced today abatements of taxes in ten cases, heard last May and June, wherein these owners had appealed from refusal of the city assessors to make abatements in the 1915 assessment.

All ten appellants are granted abatements and costs. The assessors' valuations are reduced a total of $350,200, making tax abatements of $8,054.40.

The appellants were the Cambridgeport Savings Bank, John H. Corcoran, Anne F. Southwick of Franklin, N. Y., and Mary A. Southwick of Boston; Harris Ginsberg, self and trustee; Elmer H. Bright et al., Asa C. Jameson et als, trustees; heirs of Mary L. James of Boston, Alfred Bowditch et al., trustees.

TINKHAM ASKS WORK FOR BOSTON YARD

Congressman George Holden Tinkham, acting in behalf of the Pattern-makers' Association of Boston and vicinity has requested Secretary of the Navy Daniels to change his original plans of sending patterns for the supply ship Prometheus to be built on the yards from California, where a sister ship has just been completed. Mr. Tinkham claims that it would be cheaper to make the patterns in Charlestown, and also points out that many would be likely to be broken in transit.

DEFEND ADVANCE IN PRICE OF MILK

trial days before W. J. Spillman, chief of the farm management division of the department, and B. H. Rawle, chief of the dairy division, to be followed by a thorough investigation of the dairy plants in the two States by agents of the department.

The milk situation in New York state and in Illinois will then be taken up by the officials, with dearness in New York city and in Chicago.

Herman E. Gasch, member of the executive committee of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association, told the investigating committee that a great many dairymen will be forced out of business unless milk prices are increased. He said that now the stronger dairymen are financing a number of small ones, but this situation cannot continue.

"DISASTROUS CONDITION."

"We want the public to know that the present conditions in the milk producing industry are disastrous," he said. "If small producers are forced to sell their stock the result will be down the milk route and then the milk price will increase much more rapidly than it would otherwise."

"A single dairy wagon must deliver 60 gallons of milk a day to prevent a loss to the dairyman. Eighty gallons a day is more than the average production of the average dairyman."

Price of Milk Going Up Here

Boston consumers will probably have to pay ten cents a quart for milk beginning October 1, as a result of a vote of the New England Milk Producers' Association demanding an increase from the milk contractors.

The Boston contractors declare this demand will boost the retail price of milk from nine to ten cents a quart.

Meanwhile, Federal District-Attorney George W. Anderson planned an investigation today of the action of the executive committee of the Producers' Association in raising the milk price to the contractors.

ACTION POSSIBLE.

Upon the District-Attorney's finding hinges the possibility of action by the United States attorney-general to prevent the putting into effect of the increased prices. The District-Attorney said:

"It is my duty as a United States district attorney to make an investigation of anything that looks like a combination to increase the price of commodities, and I intend to do so.

"The United States attorney-general is the only authority who has the right to bring suit against such a combination, but it is a part of my duty to report such a matter. Accordingly I shall inquire into the proposed increase of the price of milk by the New England producers."

The new price for the producers after October 1 will be 8c per quart, 4c per pint and one-half quart, free on board at Boston, as compared with the present price of thirty-eight and thirty-nine cents at the railroad stations in the country.

DEFENDS PRODUCERS.

"If the dealers don't give us the price we ask we will not sell milk to them," said President Colby of the Producers' Association. "We can, after October 1, ship our milk to Boston ourselves and we will and can supply the people of Boston ourselves. There will be plenty of dealers to buy it at 40 cents a can and there will be no milk famine. Previously we could not ship milk to Boston because the contractors controlled the cars. Now we can, and we will unless they come to our terms.

"We have done nothing illegal. We have recommended to the producers what to charge. We've got a right to recommend anything."

THE CONTRACTORS REFUSED.

The contractors refused to say that the advance demanded by the producers would be granted.

Dr. Nelson C. Davis, representing H. P. Hood & Sons, made this statement:

"We have not yet decided what price we shall offer our farmers. We have always paid them as high prices as the market will warrant and they are today getting a higher price than farmers throughout the country.

"We stated during the hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission that if transportation rates were increased somebody would have to bear the extra cost."

"If the farmers have convinced the public that they are entitled to more money for their milk, we shall pay it. In view of the fact, however, that the profit on every quart of milk handled by us last year was less than one-sixth of a cent, and these figures have never been disproved, although we have been investigated by every investigating body in existence, the consumer will have to pay these extra costs.

CONTRACTORS TALK.

"As usual the consumers will bear the burden of any increase," said Charles F. Whiting of the firm of D. Whiting & Sons, in discussing the action of the producers. At present the margin in the handling of the milk does not permit of any increased price to the producers, and an accession to their demands will be reflected in higher prices to the public."

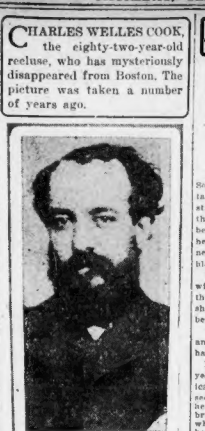
W. A. Grunstein, a milk contractor, said that he had no doubt but what the action of the directors of the Milk Producers' Association will result in milk at ten cents a quart in Boston after October 1.

EXHIBIT SHUMWAY'S FALL STRAWBERRIES

"Pena the Florist is exhibiting at his store, No. 124 Tremont street, a barrel which contains over one hundred strawberry plants bearing many blossoms and a large quantity of green and ripe fruit. This very unusual exhibit was prepared and grown by Franklin P. Shumway, No. 25 Bellevue avenue, Melrose, an amateur gardener, who for several years has been experimenting with Fall bearing strawberries and has at last been able to produce plants which will always bear liberal crops of high colored and fine flavored berries during the Fall months.

CHARLES WELLES COOK,

the eighty-two-year-old recluse, who has mysteriously disappeared from Boston. The picture was taken a number of years ago.



The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Charles Wells Cook, the eighty-two-year-old recluse whose estate is worth half a million dollars, was as deep as ever today, despite the widespread search throughout New England by police and his friends and relatives.

It was definitely established today that the missing recluse sailed on board the steamer Belfast for Rockland, Me., as he stated he would in the letter he left behind, and in which he also said he would never return.

He registered on the steamer as "Charles Cook" and was seen by a Boston man who knew him. This man, whose identity is not revealed, said Cook was very drawn and that at the time he saw him Mr. Cook was reading a newspaper in the cabin.

Circulars are being mailed to police stations and morgues alone the coast in the hope that, if the missing man jumped overboard, as is thought possible, his body was washed ashore.

Until definite news of his death is received his big estate cannot be disposed of, it was also named in his will for several years.

HAVE YOU A FRIEND WITH SKIN TROUBLE?

If you have a friend suffering with eczema or some such itching, burning eruption, what greater kindness could you do him than to say:

"Why don't you try Resinol Ointment? I know you have experimented with a dozen treatments, but I believe Resinol is different. In the first place, doctors have prescribed it for years. And then, Resinol does not claim to be a 'cure-all' — simply a soothing, healing dressing, free from all harsh drugs, that USUALLY proves successful in just such cases as yours."

Resinol Ointment is sold by all druggists. For free sample, write to Dept. 53-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.—Advertisement.

GIRL ATTACKED AS SHE FIGHTS BURGLAR

Mrs. Elizabeth DuCann, a young South End matron, was brutally attacked in her room at No. 87 Appleton street today by a man who climbed through a window, darted over to her bed, strangled her cries by clutching her around the throat and beat her nearly into unconsciousness with a blackjack.

The assailant escaped through the window when her mother came in and the sound of hurrying footsteps showed that the neighborhood had been aroused.

The attack was one of the boldest and most vicious that the South End has known for years.

Mrs. DuCann, who is twenty-six years old, required considerable medical attention before she was able to see anyone later in the day. Her head is bandaged. Her throat is bruised, swollen and black and blue where her assailant tried to throttle her. Several stitches were taken in a cut which the blackjack ripped on her head.

Mrs. DuCann, speaking with some difficulty on account of the terrible beating she had received and the shock to her nerves, gave her own story today of her experience, as follows:

TRIED TO STRANGLE HER.

"I went to bed about 11 o'clock last night. I sleep alone in the basement. My mother's room is upstairs. There are lodgers in the house.

"About 2 o'clock, as near as I can recall, I was awakened by a noise. I looked up and spied a man climbing through the open front window. He was practically in the room when I became awake enough to realize. He ran over to the bed. He was not after money. He tried to strangle me. He grasped me around the throat with his hands. I just had time to let out a good scream when he hit me with some weapon. The police say it probably was a blackjack. It fairly loosened all the teeth in my head. He beat me over the head at least once more.

"Either that first scream was enough to rouse the house and neighborhood or I was able to let out more screams, for my mother heard me and ran down. Just as she came into my room the man let go of me, ran to the window, climbed out and ran away.

"Neighbors who had heard the racket saw him running. One of the men neighbors, who was up and dressed, chased this man, but was unable to catch him.

"Other neighbors came into our house. Someone telephoned the police and a doctor. The doctor took several stitches in my head and bandaged it. There is a black mark, as you can see, on my throat. That is where his thumb pressed in when he was choking me."

SANDLER BURIED BY FRIENDS, IS STILL ALIVE

Lawrence, Sept. 14.—Max Sandler of No. 26 Salem street, Salem, is one of the very few men who had the unique experience of reading his own obituary and then returning to greet his family and friends, who mourned him as dead.

Max disappeared from his home in Salem two weeks ago. His whereabouts were a mystery. It was believed he had come here to visit his brother, who is a prominent business man. Investigation revealed he had not.

On Saturday, when a body was taken from the North Canal here, it bore close resemblance to the missing man. Relatives and friends viewed the remains and identified them as his.

The usual funeral ceremonies were held two days later and the body was placed in the city tomb. Today his family, friends and relatives were surprised to learn that he is very much alive and is working in a New Haven, Ct., shoe store.

The body was also believed to be Frank B. Hamilton's of East Hartford, but his friends came here and said it was not. The body now lies in the city tomb awaiting a claimant.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness or Head Noises

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh, or if phlegm drops in your throat and has caused catarrh of the stomach or bowels, you will be glad to know that these distressing symptoms can be entirely overcome in many instances by the following treatment, which you can easily prepare in your own home at little cost. Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). This will cost you more than 75c. Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. A decided improvement is sometimes noted after the first day's treatment. Breathing becomes easy, while the distressing head noises, headache, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., gradually disappear and the entire action of the treatment. Loss of smell, taste, defective hearing and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms which suggest the presence of catarrh and which are often overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are said to be directly caused by catarrh, therefore there must be many people whose hearing can be restored by this simple home treatment.—Advertisement.

DISTRICT PLAN OF INSURANCE ADVOCATED

"Prompt treatment is the way to prevent sickness" was illustrated in an address by Professor Joseph H. Chamberlain of Columbia University, giving some vital statistics upon the increase of sickness, at today's session of the Health and Accident Underwriters' conference in Hotel Somerset.

The professor advocated the establishment of large district health organizations administered jointly by employers and employes.

"Workers for health insurance," said Professor Chamberlain," must not lose sight of the American spirit of local independence, of the American way of doing things, and I repeat that the local self-governing district is not only the rational way, it is the natural American way of carrying on insurance.

According to the speaker, this is the plan endorsed by the Association for Labor Legislation in its bill which will be introduced next year in more than twenty states.

C. W. Hay reported at the conference for legislative committee.

Frank H. Hardison, insurance commissioner for Massachusetts, spoke of the costs and settlements in accident and health insurance.

Purposes named in the proclamation are the adoption of the general revision of the statutes, legislation which will permit the use of the so-called lands reserved fund, and the consideration of petitions for altering the harbor line of Portland harbor.

CONFESSES IN STRANGLING CASE

New York, Sept. 14.—An information given at Ironwood, Mich., by Arthur Wallonen, who is implicated in the murder of Mrs. Elizabeth Nichols, Joseph Mulholland has been arrested. Mulholland says he is a private detective.

Information had been given to the police that Mulholland was the unknown man who had been referred to repeatedly by Omni Talas, now under sentence of life imprisonment for the crime.

This man escaped at the time Mrs. Nichols was strangled to death in her home, September 8, 1915, and took with him all the jewelry stolen, valued at $14,000.

Detectives took Mulholland in an automobile to different resorts in the city for identification purposes and to certain pawnshops. The police say they have been watching the movements of Mulholland for a long time.

Mulholland was formally charged with being in the conspiracy to murder Mrs. Nichols.

Deputy Commissioner Scull said Mulholland made a confession of the part taken by him in the robbery and murder of Mrs. Nichols.

In his confession Mulholland described the actual crime as follows:

"The crime was first planned September 7, 1915. I met Wallonen and Lahto and they told of Talas being the inside man. We agreed to meet at a pool parlor at 8 o'clock on the night of September 8, and from there went to the Nichols home.

"We knew the cook and butler were going out. I saw the cook come out and speak to Wallonen. This made me nervous and I didn't want to carry out my part. The butler then went out.

"I first went to the basement door with a dummy package for Mrs. Nichols. Talas opened the door and admitted us. We then tied him up and went up to the parlor floor, where we met Edith Landfield, the maid. We grabbed her and threw her across the bed and tied her hands behind her and feet and bound something over her mouth.

"I stood on guard while Wallonen and Lahto went upstairs. They were gone a long time. They finally came down with the jewelry and we went away. I don't know what happened upstairs. The first I knew of Mrs. Nichols' death was in the newspapers. Wallonen and Lahto denied while I stayed."

The police have been informed of the disposal made of Mrs. Nicholls' jewelry, and it is expected most, if not all of it, will be recovered. Inspector Gray has located some of the jewelry.

LOST THE USE OF HIS RIGHT HAND

Milk Inspector of Charlestown Was in Serious Condition from Rheumatism.

M. H. GRANT.

"The harm worked by the taking into the human system of mineral opiates or other poisons, is incalculable," said The Plant Juice Man, who has his headquarters at the Houghton & Dutton Co.'s store, corner of Beacon and Tremont streets. "The natural vegetable medicines are constructive in their action, soothing inflamed tissues, strengthening weak parts, toning up sluggish organs and gently stimulating them to normal vigor and activity. They build up the health of the whole body. The others act by substitution. They practically all have violent, irritating and poisonous properties, and in place of the natural action of the organ, they goad it to a violent reaction, which leaves it exhausted and inflamed and less able than ever to do its proper work. The next time it will depend upon the drug and so a habit is quickly formed.

"Thousands of people are building up their health, happiness and usefulness by the use of the new herbal stomach remedy Plant Juice—Nature's own peerless remedy. Not a day passes but what statements are received from local people, telling of the great benefit they have received. One of the latest is that of Mr. M. H. Grant, who lives at No. 8 Austin Street, Charlestown, Mass., who is a well-known business man, having been milk inspector for many years. He stated:

"I have suffered with rheumatism in my right arm, hands and limbs for over two years. My kidneys were affected and I had terrible pains across my back. My right hand was so swollen that I could not use the arm at all together. My stomach was weak and I could hardly keep anything on it. I could not sleep and had headaches. Many spells of heartburn had passed all over my body and felt completely run down. Finally I started to take Plant Juice and I will say that no other man of me. I can eat anything I want now, sleep well and have no more trouble with rheumatism and have regained the use of my right hand again.

I feel that I owe this testimonial to Plant Juice and anyone can come and see me at my home if they wish to do so."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Co.'s store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

BRICKLEY WITHOLD MATES

King of Drop-Kickers Gives Harvard Backs Drill at Stadium; Desmond and Whitman Report.

Charles E. Brickley, who stood alone in his college days as the king of all field-goal kickers, has turned faithfully to the call of his Alma Mater and intends to give football affairs at Harvard, from now on, just as much time as he can spare from his duties at Boston College, where he is head coach.

This means Brickley will stray Stadiumwards some three times a week until way into the season, and who knows but future Harvard football triumps in the season now approaching may bear the Brickley brand, just as did those which he himself participated in when doing time as an undergraduate?

Drop-kicking aspirants at Harvard this Fall are plentiful, but they have all been kicking on their own account, without much instruction, and getting practically nowhere.

Brickley's call at the Stadium therefore, served to bring order out of chaos, and a class of ten pupils started their first course under the great master of the kicking art they wish to learn.

Brickley has ten scholars, the most promising being Billy Robinson, the varsity quarterback. Robinson is carrying the hopes of all Harvard this Fall, should the Crimson face its greatest rivals in closely-waged warfare.

Ned Ginn is "green" material as a football player, but a fairly accurate booter. Rufe Bond gives promise of showing a lot. He received considerable coaching from Brickley when a student at Everett High. The others working under Brickley's direction are Culbert, Mosher, Harwood, Hoffman and Horne.

All the kicks attempted were made from a point directly in front of one of the goals on the freshman gridiron and none was made from beyond the twenty-five yard line.

Evers Hopes to Regain Health by Having Hidden Tooth Chiseled from Jaw

Photograph of John J. Evers, captain of the Braves, showing the exact location of the hidden molar, which is believed to have caused his recent attack of neuritis. The Trojan will soon submit to an operation in order to have this hitherto undiscovered tooth removed. The tooth now lies entirely embedded under the gum and turned crosswise so that the point of it is up against another tooth, beneath the gum.

John J. Evers will submit soon to an operation in order to have removed a hitherto undiscovered tooth which surgeons believe to be responsible for much of his recent suffering. The Trojan has had one tooth removed in the regular fashion.

Soon he'll go to his dentist and have the troublesome member taken out in a fashion that isn't hardly regular. He'll be forced to submit to some cutting and chiseling by the Iswasmith. Then the dentist and X-Ray expert think he'll regain his former health and be fit to play ball.

The accompanying photograph shows the Evers jaw and the exact location of the bothersome molar. It will be seen that the tooth started to grow regularly enough but for some peculiar reason took a sudden turn and didn't grow far enough up.

It has twisted around until it lies entirely embedded under the gum and turned crosswise so that the point of it is up against a section of another tooth, beneath the gum. Surgeons all over the National League circuit have examined Evers and were totally unable to discover just what was causing his neuritis.

He finally sought relief at his home in Troy, N. Y. He was being treated by doctors in that vicinity when Manager Stallings appealed to him to return to Boston. He came here and submitted to an X-Ray examination. As a result his advisers believe that the cause of the trouble has been ascertained and are hopeful of a quick recovery.

Evers looks considerably better than he did just before he left Boston for his home, during August. After he had one tooth pulled he felt better and is optimistic of success following the more important operation. The surgeon-dentist who is treating his case has not as yet decided on the exact date of the operation but it will come shortly.

Meanwhile the Trojan is attending the ball games and trying to be as cheerful as possible. He chafes under the restraint which has kept him out of the game so much during the past year or two. He is now, however, entirely hopeful of getting back and of having a few more first class seasons.

TWO BIG RACES CLOSE

Braves Winthin Ten Points of Dodgers, While Tygers Now Two Points Behind Red-Sox.

the Robins and about a game behind the Philadelphia team. Today's win for the Braves and a loss by the other clubs would result in a still further gain. In event of such a happening the standings would be:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Brooklyn	78	53	.596
Boston	78	54	.591
Philadelphia	77	55	.583

Thus it can be seen that the Braves would be less than half a game behind Flynn, almost in a tie, and about the same distance ahead of Philadelphia. Were the reverse to happen, that is, Boston lose and Philadelphia, Brooklyn win, the standings would be:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Brooklyn	78	54	.591
Philadelphia	78	54	.591
Boston	78	55	.571

And while this race goes merrily on the struggle in the American League grows tighter. Detroit gained substantially on Boston as a result of the Red Sox idleness and the Tyger win yesterday. Chicago also made a gain. The standings this morning are:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Boston	78	57	.578
Detroit	80	59	.576
Chicago	79	60	.568

The situation is almost a tie between Boston and Detroit for the leadership. As regards games won and lost they are practically even, but in percentage Joe Lannin's Sox still have the edge. Chicago is but a game behind. Were the Sox to win today and Detroit and Chicago lose the standing would be:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Boston	79	57	.581
Detroit	80	60	.571
Chicago	78	61	.561

Thus Detroit would be a game back with Chicago, two and a half away from the lead. However, were Detroit and Chicago to win while the Sox were losing the standing would then be:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Detroit	81	59	.579
Boston	78	58	.574
Chicago	79	60	.568

In the National League struggle all signs would tend to point toward a Braves victory today. However, both Philadelphia and Brooklyn appear due to drub St. Louis and Pittsburgh respectively. The recent hitting spree on the part of the Braves has done much to strengthen their chances in the fight for the flag.

Whereas both Philadelphia and Brooklyn appeared especially formidable when here recently they now appear to weaker advantage. And at the same time the Braves are apparently coming back again. The spirit of victory is with the Braves once more and their chances of success in the battle for the pennant are as bright as ever.

The Red Sox are by no means a team that has cracked and those who expect to see the Lannin-Carrigan entry fall by the wayside are perhaps a trifle premature in their assumptions. Today the Tygers would appear to have an edge over the Sox, that is, in the games they play today. Boston has spent a couple of nights in the sleepers and will not be any too fresh facing the Browns this afternoon.

Meanwhile the Tygers are playing in their own class against a team that has occasioned them little if any bother this season—Bill Donovan's Yankees. However, it will not always be so. Shortly leaders meet leaders and in such times a bitter struggle generally results.

In the history of Red Sox-Tyger battles for victory a close perusal of the statistics will show that in a majority of the instances the Red Sox have emerged victorious. Such was the case a year ago and Boston fans can sit back confident that the present World's Champions will acquit themselves creditably in Boston, Detroit and Chicago.

TWO CARDS DRAW FINES

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.—Outfielder Smith of the Cardinals has been fined $25 and suspended for ten days by President Tener of the National League for his run-in with Umpire Byron here Tuesday. Beecher also drew a $25 platter.

LAST NIGHT IN THE RING.

New York, Sept. 14.—Packy Hosmer defeated Joe Mooney in a slashing ten-round bout at the Pioneer Club. Johnny Glaton won from "Kid" Burns.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 14.—Richie Mitchell, the local lightweight, and Johnny O'Brien of Yonkers, N. Y., in a ten-round, no decision contest here.

HARVARD PLAYERS LAND IN SEMI-FINALS

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.—G. Colket Caner, Harvard, defeated Leonard Beekman, Princeton, in the third round in the intercollegiate Lawn Tennis tournament at Merion, while his teammate, Joseph Pfaffman, won from Arthur Coffey, Princeton. In the semi-finals today Caner plays Jerry Webber, the Yale captain, and Pfaffman goes against Ralph Warren, University of California.

Caner and Richard H. Harte, Jr., defeated Beekman and Philip Vandeventer, Princeton, in the opening round of the doubles, while the other Crimson pair, Whitehouse and Pfaffman, eliminated Weber and Stoddard, Yale.

RING REMARKS

JOE McCARTHY, the South Boston boxing manager, leaves for Halifax today with Johnny Wilson, where the rock young middleweight meets Robbie McDonald in a fifteen-round battle next Tuesday night. Wilson was good enough to give "Silent" Martin some ten seconds and the toughest sort of a tussle. Hence, with the Armory A. A. boxing home talent, it seems strange it doesn't go after Wilson, for there's a good chance the southpaw is just about the gloveswoman hereabouts.

VIC MORAN, the Southern lightweight, is due back in Boston today. He's also in the O'Rourke stable. Vic made a good impression in his recent battle with Frankie Mark at the Arena and will probably be seen in action again at an early date.

NEXT Tuesday night's show at the Arena will scarcely prove a stiver. Young Pal Moore, the Memphis bantamweight, and Young Wolf of New Bedford, who put up a slashing fight here two weeks ago, are to go it again. Then, the Terry Brooks-Joe Connolly battle is bound to be replete with action.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

JUST A HABIT.

He is a gloomy old b— and sober
And carries a frown on his face;
He is full of regret just as if he had bet
And lost his last dime on a race.

If he smiles it is painful and sickly,
As cheerless as old Connie Mack's.
You can see the same smile when a mug bets his pile
And is caught with a lone pair of jacks.

Oh, why should a coach in the Autumn
Go around with a frown on his brow?
In Winter and Spring he will whistle and sing.
But he looks like a funeral now.

He doesn't know why he is gloomy
When football begins in the Fall.
He doesn't know why there's a tear in his eye—
It is merely a habit—that's all.

When our scientists succeed in discovering the psychological phenomena which cause football coaches to look gloomy we shall have another job for them. Why do men wear spats?

We are given to understand that Carl Morris and Frank Moran will meet in New York this Fall. Fall is the right word.

MORE ABOUT MARY.

Mary had a little calf,
And so it isn't strange
That Mary often heaved a sigh
And wished the styles would change.

Connie Mack's team may be a financial failure this year but it is not due to the size of the salaries Connie pays.

Mike Gibbons is thinking about taking on Jack Dillon. Thinking about it will not hurt him.

In the light of recent events, various superstitious persons have a hunch that this will be a lucky year for Charles (Chick) Evans Hughes.

BRING BACK THE ANCIENT FIGHTS.

In days of old
When knights were bold
The knight who came to grief
Would never bawl
Or kick or call
The referee a thief.

He did not growl
Or yelp or howl
As losers do today.
He could not speak,
The poor old geeg,
For he had passed away.

Lady Gammage First in $1,000 Pacing Stake

White River, Junction, Vt., Sept. 14.—Lady Gammage still has the cleaning-up habit, for winning the $1,000 stake for 2:20 pacers at the Fair Grounds proved simply a romp, although she lost the first heat through an accident in which Echo Jilket and Gay Petross, as well as herself, fell.

Drivers Lester Dore, Fred Pierce and Irving Pottle, while painfully bruised, all remained in the saddle. Art Martin dragged down second money with the Boston-owned horse, Don McKinney.

Togal had a pleasant outing in the 2:20 trot, and Major Dean proved best in the 2:14 pace.

Today's feature event is the $1,000 2:20 trotting stake. It brings together a fairly good field, including Cochase, Maid, Billy Burke, T. S. Bingen, Somersworth Boy, Grace Flagler, Lizzie Worthey and Jane Grey.

TIAJUANA WINTER MEET.

San Diego, Cal., Sept. 14.—Announcement is made that the Fall meeting at Tiajuana will open November 11.

Expressive Lou Is Best in $6,000 Futurity Race

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Driver Tom Murphy was the star of the third day of the Grand Circuit racing at the State Fair track, winning two of the four races and getting third money in another.

The feature event was the $6,000 American Horsebreeder's Futurity for three-year-olds, in which Murphy piloted the New York owned filly, Expressive Lou, to victory.

The Western colt, Bingen Silk, was the favorite, as he won at Indianapolis last week and trotted the fastest heat for one of his age this season, but he was no match for the filly. Expressive Lou won in straight heats and is now the leading money-winning three-year-old pacer this season.

Murphy started Mater Bingen, a three-year-old, against aged horses in the 2:14 pace. She won her second heat in 2:06¼, being the fastest by a three-year-old this season.

Young Todd, a four-year-old from the Cox stable, won his fourth race when he beat the 2:14 pacers in straight heats.

An Open Letter to
Thomas W. Lawson
Financier

Dear Mr. Lawson:

1. No man in this country realizes the value of enterprise more than you do. No one is more aggressive, forceful and fearless. I still recall, with pleasure, your vigorous advertising campaign in the American newspapers and the profound impression it created.

2. I* want to create just such an impression with the LORD SALISBURY Cigarette. I've got the solution of the cigarette problem for all classes of people and if I can make the smokers see it, the work is done. After that the Lord Salisbury will take care of itself.

3. This Cigarette, Mr. Lawson, is the only 100% pure-all-Turkish-tobacco cigarette in existence that sells for as low as 15 cents for 20.

4. Hence the Lord Salisbury Cigarette is a big commercial and economic triumph because instead of interesting and benefitting only one class of people, it interests and benefits—and will prove desirable to all classes, and for that reason it is a mighty big thing.

5. And because it is of a very fine grade of pure Turkish tobacco and sells at a minimum price, it reduces the cost of a commodity which has become an undeniable necessity. To a man like you, to whom enterprise is an hourly thought, this means a great public benefit.

Cordially yours,

Ernest J. Goulston

Big Club Next Year
Braves Are Building

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

During the course of a recent conversation with G. T. Stallings, the well known baseballist, a most significant remark was dropped by that worthy which for a time had us staggered. We puzzled and puzzled, but couldn't understand his meaning. Now we get the drift.

Said Stallings: "We'll have a great ball club next year."

Those few words were the wholesome of our worriment. To save a little we couldn't figure how the present outfit would be much better in another season. At the time of the remark the club had dropped several in a row and looked anything but a regular club.

THE BIG SECRET.

Now the soup's all cleared. All hands are in on the big secret. Stallings, backed and supported by Percy D. Haughton, is in Cincinnati with drafts for sixteen minor league players and thirty-five regularly certified checks to cover the cost of the drafting. This we can very easily see that it's going to be some club next Spring. Probably not more than fifteen other clubs will put in drafts for those same sixteen men so the Braves chances are excellent.

It's just as simple as rolling off a log to get the drift of Stallings' significant remark. The draft is about as good as settled now and Boston fandom has the prospects of seeing a regular first class ball club representing the parent league next season. Whether the present outfit cops the flag or not we have something to look forward to. This Braves' draft list must be a work of art, for according to well authenticated reports G. T. spent several nights in his room at the Copley Plaza figuring it out.

WAIT FOR THE WORD.

All we have to do, back here, is sit down and wait for the announcement from Cincinnati which will clarify the whole situation. That is to say all that remains is the sanction announcement by the National Commission of the names of the new Braves. Sixteen of them will be some bumper crop that's no wheeze.

Meanwhile, Fred Mitchell isn't at all concerned regarding next season's club. He's worrying over grabbing today's pastime. Having a managerial average of .818, there or thereabouts, Mitch is anxious to retain his grip. Being in sole charge today he's bound to inject all the baseball he knows into the contest between his outfit and the Cubs. He has Pat Ragan and Jess Barnes to pick from and its an even guess he starts the former. Tinker will in all probability oppose him with Gene Packard or George McConnell.

"MITCH" CONFIDENT.

We crossed Mitch's path this pleasant forenoon, and from the acting cub heard much of interest. However it wouldn't do to let the entire world in on his thoughts. He only hopes the club continues knocking that old ball, and if they do he can't see anything to it but a win today and a win in the league race. Mitch assumed the managerial toga soon after the second game started yesterday, and was boss when the Braves actually copped. Consequently we charge the win upon 2 is profit side of the ledger.

Not since the Braves started their last Western invasion with a preliminary visit to Brooklyn have they looked more formidable than they have against the Cubs. Of course the argument will be advanced that the Cubs are far from being a championship team. That may be and again it may not be. The Cubs minus Zimmerman are playing anappier ball than they did before. The pitching holds good, but the breaks go against them at times.

The Braves have clearly demonstrated that their batting optics are once more in first-class trim. And, friends, let it be perfectly well understood that any afternoon those Braves arrive at the big lot with their eyes well trimmed there's nothing to it for the visitors. They clout the ball with an abandon which augurs for a sure enough win. Since Monday they have batted hard and unrelentlessly. Their attack has been vicious and their fielding considerably improved.

Speaking of fielding recalls the fact that Rabbit Maranville is once more in harness. The clever little shortstop was very much among those present yesterday afternoon. His brief respite had apparently worked wonders, for he not only clouted the ball often, hard and savagely, but in addition was his old self on the defence. He seemed to instill the entire team with a feeling of confidence that bred success.

Hose Open in St. Louis
Leonard to Buck Plank

St. Louis, Sept. 14.—Racing along on practically even terms with the Tygers, the Red Sox begin their final Western drive to the pennant against the Browns at Sportsman's Park this afternoon.

Only two games will be played against the Browns, this trip. Carrigan regards this as a rather lucky break, for the cohorts of Fielder Jones have won more games from the scarlet-hosed athletes this Summer than any other team in the circuit.

Manager Jones has prepared Eddie Plank for the opener. The forty-one-year-old gunner is at his best right now. He simply toyed with the White Sox in his last start. It was Plank's turn to work in Chicago yesterday, but Jones kept him out of the box score.

Then Catcher Hank Severeid, who has been on the shelf with a badly spiked foot for ten days, is ready to get back in the game. When Severeid was injured the Browns hit the slump that carried them into the second division.

Hank has a hitting mark of near .300. His presence in the lineup just about doubles the pitchers' efficiency, too.

Larry Gardner's damaged toe is yielding slowly to treatment. He says he will work today if Carrigan says the word, but the chances are he will be allowed to rest up a little longer.

President Lannin wired Carrigan that Jack Barry's injured hand is still in splints and it will be two weeks at least before he is in trim for work. Where it was feared Barry was out of the game for the season, there's now a chance he will be able to get in the closing games at home with the Yankees and Macks.

Carrigan is not worried about the menacing presence of the Tygers. He claims he would rather have the Bengals on his heels that the White Sox.

Manager Bill laughs at the advantage the Tygers own by completing the season on their home grounds.

"We won the decisive series from Detroit last year, can, and will, repeat," says Carrigan.

Carrigan plans to checkmate Jones by using "Dutch" Leonard in the opener. The last time this southpaw went to the hill against the Browns he failed to allow them as much as a single hit. That was in Boston last month.

BUCK WEAVER GOES BROKE IN BUSINESS

Chicago, Sept. 14.—George D. ("Buck") Weaver, infielder of the Chicago White Sox, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the Federal Court, seeking relief from creditors of a billiard hall enterprise which he started on the South Side two years ago and which recently closed. His liabilities are scheduled as $1,002.55 and his assets as nothing.

"BEATRICE FAIRFAX"

Novelized From the Great Film Play

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

JIMMY BARTON'S knowledge of Richard Conley, plus my information gained from Madge and Margaret, gave us a fairly complete story and a very definite feeling that we understood the young lawyer with all his lovable weakness. But there was just one gap in our evidence—one gap which neither of us could bridge. And that was later to prove a yawning abyss before the feet of one or two greatly surprised people.

As we made our return trip to Blue Cove Jimmy told me his part of the story. Directly we suspected that Conley was the man in the case. Jimmy had gone down to the law offices of Conley & Conley and had sent in his card requesting an interview.

Later that redoubtable youth persuaded me to involve myself in the situation. Our position was desperate—and we fought fire with fire, as you shall see.

"The interview" was readily granted, but surprise swung to instant dismay when Jimmy fairly hurled a question at the younger man, "Do you know Madge Minturn?"

Of course young Conley swore he had never heard of the girl—but astute Jimmy noticed that the match with which the lawyer was striking his cigarette had flickered out very suddenly—but not before it burned the trembling fingers which were holding it.

A tiny bit of evidence that—but Jimmy, the slouch, knew he was worth following up, and when half an hour later Richard Conley hurried into the Grand Central and embarked on a train for Blue Cove, Jimmy was close on his tracks.

Jimmy Follows Conley

Conley took the second of the town's supply of ramshackle cabs, and Jimmy had to purchase an even more ramshackle bicycle. As you know he passed me on my return to the station—but as you do not know he turned to wave a farewell and blow me an audacious kiss.

"That kiss didn't get me much, Miss Beatrice," laughed Jimmy. "Nothing but an encounter with a stone and a tumble which smashed none of my ribs, but all of the bicycle's vital organs. I had to go on foot after that and by the time I caught up with my quarry he was coming out of the woods, and I concluded that he had finished his interview with the girl—but I was in time to see another interview begin.

"Conley bumped into a queer looking chap. Say, do you know he looked like some of those mental defectives you were working over this Winter. Worse than that he seemed to me. I found out later that he's the village character—some of them call him looney and some of them say he's a hermit, but all the brave inhabitants of Blue Cove seem a little afraid of him."

Jimmy had discovered this much and that the chap's name was Harry Wilkins.

"And I have a hunch, Miss Beatrice, that Harry Wilkins and Richard Conley went through some transaction that boded very little good for your friend, Madge Minturn!"

I remembered my glimpse of the man's sullen, evil face, with its loose lipped animal mouth and its furtive eyes. I remembered, too, how weak Richard Conley's good looking face had seemed to me as I glimpsed it in passing—, and sudden fear took hold of my heart.

Mrs. Woods had not seen Madge for all the long hours during which I had gone to New York, interviewed Margaret Payne and made the trip back to the Journal office.

Again my terrified fancy leaped to the portentious question, "Where was Madge Minturn?" And hard upon it followed a second question of equal portent, "What affairs could Richard Conley and Harry Wilkins, the village ne'er-do-well, be discussing?"

"Do you remember just where Conley and Wilkins went?" I asked.

Jimmy Barton (Harry Fox) seizes Wilkins in the barn after Beatrice Fairfax (Grace Darling) and Madge Minturn recover the baby.

"Yes, and that's where we're bound. You're going to see a tumble-down little cabin which houses an absolute renegade. And I think there'll be a rather startling denouement and a crusher for the plans of Wilkins, Conley and Company." And more than that Jimmy refused to say, though I begged him to tell me exactly what he did expect to discover when we got to Wilkins' cabin.

The Cabin in the Woods

In a lonely nook of the woods we came upon the cabin. It had a brooding, sullen look strangely like the expression on the face of its master. Jimmy hid me behind a clump of bushes and hurried forward alone. For a minute I permitted him to manage the situation to suit himself.

Suddenly a sound came to my ears. It was a woman's shriek—a call for help in a voice which sounded definitely familiar.

Automatically I rushed out from hiding and hurried toward the cabin. As Jimmy turned the knob of the door there was one wild, agonized scream which became suddenly muffled and was followed by a thick pall of silence—silence unbroken and sinister—silence suggesting tragedy of the most evil sort.

One moment the woods had been alive and thrilling with agonized sound; the next moment they were still—and dead.

I stumbled forward with hot tears smarting in my eyes and impotent rage surging through my heart. I felt that terrible harm had come to the girl who had written to me with such pathetic pleading that I help her get a name for a baby.

While Jimmy and I were going about things in a methodical, plodding way forces of which we knew nothing might have been at work, and Madge Minturn had perhaps suffered greater evil than that from which she had begged me to free her.

As these thoughts raced across my brain I was forcing my body to race, too, and a second later I followed Jimmy across the threshold of the cabin.

A Fearful Struggle

A second more and I was the witness of a wild struggle. Wilkins was fighting with the physical strength a man whose mental ability is far below par often displays. It took all Jimmy's science to master him. But at last he conquered, and Wilkins became utterly cowed—subdued and frightened—and entirely respectful in his attitude toward the man who had been able to gain physical control of him.

In a corner of the cabin crouched Madge Minturn violently that we had come just in time and that if we had been a minute later there would have been nothing for her to do but kill herself.

"But my baby, Miss Fairfax—make him find my baby. If anything's happened to little Richard I'm going to kill myself. I couldn't bear it—nothing matters but just baby. If he's only alive and well everything will be all right.

"Don't you know where your baby is, Madge?" I asked a little severely.

"No—he stole my boy—Wilkins did. Oh, Miss Fairfax, do you think he's done him any harm?"

"Wilkins," said Jimmy sternly, it will be just as well for you if nothing unpleasant has happened to little Richard—first, we'll find him, and then you'll give a little explanation of your performance this afternoon. I think I can guess just about what it has been, but I won't do any guessing. You'll talk and I'll take down in writing every word you say. Now march and be quick about it."

The frightened creature obeyed almost automatically. Sheer terror had possession of him.

"I had this kid in the barn," said he. "I guess he's all right."

As we passed out of the door he lunged out indistinctly and kicked a dog which came fawning across his path.

And as Madge watched him the agonized fear on her face showed that she wondered what sufferings this evil creature might have made her innocent little baby endure.

Their Married Life

Copyright, 1916, International News Service.

The house party was becoming a huge success by the time Saturday night had arrived. At dinner Helen had been placed next to Ned Burns and Warren had been put opposite her, between Frances and Lola Wilcox. Dana Benedict was on the other side of Miss Wilcox, and she kept her solicitations rolling between the two men impartially.

Helen had gone to her room early to dress. She was feverish to be ready before Warren should return. She did not want any words with him while she was at Babbie's. Somehow she had an intuitive desire to avoid Warren as much as possible after her discovery.

Evidently in the moral code of such women as Lola Wilcox a man's wife played a very small role, hardly more than that of a super. It was horrible.

Helen had heard vaguely of such things as emotional friendships between a man and a woman. They had seemed abnormal to her, and the thought of Warren's drifting into such an affair made her almost frantic. She wondered what she would do if the time ever came when she could say to herself that there was no need of patching things up, and she would have to tell Warren that she could not bear it any longer.

She thought of all these things while she was dressing for dinner. The little gown that she had bought was a queer little thing. It was a left-over model from the Summer season that Helen had secured for very little. At first glance she had thought it entirely unsuitable, and then a queer freak of fancy had impelled her to buy it.

It was really the type of gown that a woman like Lola Wilcox would choose—queer and almost barbaric, of black lace and touches of flaming scarlet. The neck was cut out very low in front, although the gown was an attempt at modesty. It had a rolling collar of scarlet, the sleeves were of black lace with soft wide rolling cuffs of scarlet, and there were touches of red gleaming through the lace all over the dress.

Helen had bought black slippers with red heels, and when she was finally ready and turned to look at herself in the mirror, she felt like a lamb decked out for the slaughter.

SHE LEAVES WARREN

What was she doing? She was dressed for battle with another woman. As Frances would put it, she was about to make the first move in her campaign. Well, it would be a thorough battle, and then let the laurels be given to the one who came out first.

As Helen opened her bedroom door she heard Warren's laugh on the stairs. If she stayed where she was she would surely meet him. What should she do? She would hide in the little clothes closet at the head of the stairs, and a moment later she had slipped into its friendly darkness. Warren came up and went into the room, and then Helen came out of her hiding place, pulled a bow into place, and with flaming cheeks descended into the living room. Babbie was there, and Frances and nearly all of the men. Lola Wilcox was absent. No doubt she had gone up to dress. Helen's appearance created quite a furore. Ned sprang up and came over to her.

"Well, Helen of Troy," he said daringly, "you are dressed for conquest, aren't you? You didn't think it necessary to subdue me, did you? Remember, I have been your slave for years."

Helen laughed gaily. No matter how Ned acted she would treat everything as a joke. She heard the remarks of the others and knew that she was tossing off remarks quickly. Lola Wilcox came down stairs dressed in white, and Warren came almost immediately after her.

They all went into dinner informally, Helen talking feverishly to Ned. She avoided Warren's eyes, and the consciousness that he had not seen her gown, and that she was quite the best dressed woman in the room, and almost the gayest, filled her with confidence. She responded gaily to Ned's foolishness, although the fact that Lola Wilcox conversed a great deal in a monotone with Warren never escaped her.

Once she met Frances' eyes and they were filled with approval. Frances, however, was too busy with Carp to give much attention to anyone else, and Helen fell under a strain. Once she looked up at some laughing remark from Lola Wilcox and caught Warren's eyes fixed on her. She met them squarely, and then as though she had not seen him, turned back to Ned.

NED SUGGESTS A WALK

Afterward they all broke up into little groups, and Ned, who had taken possession of her, drew her to the porch and they looked together out over the soft rolling country.

"Shall we take a walk?" he suggested.

There was nothing that Helen wanted to do less, but it was her opportunity, for they were all gathered around a little table where Babbie was dispensing coffee, and if she wanted to make her parting off with Ned Burns ostentatious it seemed to be her one opportunity.

"All right," she said brightly, and at that moment Babbie called to her.

"Coffee, Helen?"

"No, thanks, dear. I'm going for a walk up that delicious lane. It's just too attractive to leave alone."

"Beware!" called Lola Wilcox audaciously.

And then Helen had an inspiration.

"But it's such a lovely night," she called back sweetly.

Warren was looking after her, his eyes dark with anger, and every one else watched. Helen's plan was working beautifully, but somehow the triumph she should be enjoying was turning to ashes in her mouth. Why was it? It was because she wasn't that type of a woman and never could be. It was because she had no desire to flirt with other men, whether it was to give her husband a lesson or for some other reason.

Because she was a one man's woman and always would be, because her gown belied the woman she was in it, and she had no qualities that came naturally of the kind that were second nature to a woman of Lola Wilcox's type. And what if she had gained her triumph and had made Warren jealous? What did it all amount to? Was she any happier? No, she was miserable. She had a sudden loathing of Ned, a sudden desire to run away and hide.

(Watch for the next instalment of this interesting series.)

Helen Tries Hard to Act the Flirt

Wives I Might Have Been

The Wife of a Tired Business Man Who Developed New Traits After Marriage

By JANE M'LEAN.

A tired business man to me always means a jaded type of individual who goes to the lightest of social remedies and is amused for a brief space of time, and who wears a perpetually weary expression.

I never knew that Clyde was that kind of a man until he married. It's strange how men develop these undesirable traits as soon as they feel that they can be natural, it's like the reversion to the primitive that we read about in sociology. Even I, and I am rather hard to deceive, never suspected Clyde of stodgy qualities. Father used to say:

"Yes, I like Clyde; he's a good fellow. Of course, I don't think he'll ever amount to a great deal."

And then it would be my cue to become indignant and to ask what he meant. That was when I was rather young. Clyde was paying me a great deal of attention and bringing me a great deal of very good candy.

I discovered that I didn't want Clyde when he began to make love to me. That changed everything, and Clyde went his way and I went mine. Then I heard that Clyde was to be married.

"Such a nice girl," people said, "and so well suited to him." And I just kept still, because I know that if she were suited to Clyde she would have to be a different type of girl from me.

And now Clyde is married. He and the "nice girl" live in a little apartment. The nice girl thinks it is the sum and substance of her life to cook three meals a day for Clyde, and every night she darns stockings on one side of the table and he sits in his slippers with his coat off and reads the paper. They never go anywhere. Clyde is always too tired. They will always have enough to live on comfortably for Clyde is one of those who makes money and saves it. Some girls don't require anything more. I really believe that this girl is happy. Perhaps she should be.

"Well, Clyde is married, and has a nice girl," father said the other evening at dinner.

"Yes, she makes him a good cook, but a good lot of jam in the ends, cook, because you know the ends are always left for us."

A Safety Play.

The Man: "My wife says that if I were to die she would remain a widow."

The Girl: "Evidently she thinks that there isn't another man in the world like you."

The Man: "On the contrary, she's afraid there is, and that she might get him."

"Yes, it must be thrilling to live with Clyde," I observed loftily. "Of all the stagnant kinds of existence, commend me to a life of three meals a day with Clyde."

"Why Anne," observed father, slyly, "your not jealous, are you?"

And I just kept still. How was he supposed to know that I might have married Clyde?

Which Was Hit?

A lawyer, somewhat notorious for his sharp practice, represented an old laboring man in an action against a business house. The suit was for injuries received by the old man from a brick which had struck him on the head during a high wind, the missile having been dislodged from the roof of the firm's business premises.

To avoid litigation the defendants compromised the matter by sending a check for $200 to the prosecuting lawyer.

When, the following day, the old man received a letter to attend at the lawyer's office, he conjured up visions of receiving vast wealth as a salve for his injuries.

"Well, Mr. ——," said the wily lawyer, "I got $250 out of ——, a firm, but, of course, you'll quite understand that my out-of-pocket expenses have been very heavy. In fact, I have been to so much expense and so much waste of time over this trivial matter that I think it will be fair if I now hand you $50 for your share of the money I have received from the defendants."

"Thank you, sorr, for yure gineerosity," quoth the son of Erin, with deep feeling. "But would ye pardon me for axing ye one question—which of us did the brick hit?"

Good Ends

Mamma was serving jam pudding.

"Johnny, will you take a little pudding?"

Johnny: "Yes; will you give me the ends, please?"

Mamma: "But why do you wish to have the ends, Johnny?"

Johnny: "Why, when I was in the kitchen I heard Ellen say to cook, 'Put a good lot of jam in the ends, cook, because you know the ends are always left for us.'"

A Safety Play.

The Man: "My wife says that if I were to die she would remain a widow."

The Girl: "Evidently she thinks that there isn't another man in the world like you."

The Man: "On the contrary, she's afraid there is, and that she might get him."

In Our Wonderful World

The vocabulary of some of the Australian and New Zealand troops with the British forces at the front would puzzle Solomon himself. Judging by some of the specimens given in the Gazette of the Third London General Hospital. The following dialogue is quoted by a transport officer lately in Gallipoli:

"Halloa, chum! I've just heard some bonza news."

"What? Another furlie?"

"No, dinkum oil this time; the boys have trashed the Turks on the right and got fifty prisoners, who say they have had mafeesh tucker for two days."

Bonza corresponds with "ripping" or "tophole." A furlie is a rumor, dinkum means "genuine." And dinkum oil "authenticated news." Mafeesh is slippy for "clear out," and mafeesh, which is borrowed from the same tongue, means "nothing."

When an Australian wishes to acquire something he "shakes it," whereas the British Tommy either "makes it," or "scrounges it." Tomy's slang is largely derived from Hindustani, and includes such words as "chipperee" for "clean up," "put some jildi into it," meaning "hurry up," and "don't have a dekko," when he wants to have a look at something.

Tosh is jam—cherb, beer—rooty, bread—dough, money—jipps, gravy —mucktim, butter—chan, tea. "Swinging the lead" is pretending or deceiving. When an article is "spare" it means that it is not wanted.

The devout in all lands have their own particular way of giving outward demonstrations to their piety. In Russia, it frequently takes the form of wearing miniature Bibles as charms on the watch-chain. They are got up in attractive form about an inch square and three-eighths of an inch in thickness, and they contain five books of Moses. The text of the book is in Hebrew and the title in Latin. It is true that the book could not be read without the aid of a powerful magnifying glass, but that does not trouble the Russian. He places his great reliance on the fact that he carries the "Word" on his person.

Train Your Hair as an Actress Does

No class of people devotes as much time to beauty as do actresses, and naturally no class must be more careful to retain and develop their charms. Inquiry among them develops the information that in hair care they find it necessary to shampoo with any makeshift hair cleanser. Instead they have studied to find the finest preparation made for shampooing and bringing out the beauty of the hair. The majority of them say that to enjoy the best hair wash and scalp stimulator that is known, get a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. It costs less than three cents for this amount. After its use the hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—Advertisement.

To Help Nature Shed a Bad Complexion

Beauty devotees are enthusiastic over the beautifying qualities of mercolized wax. Nothing discovered within recent years accomplishes so much, so quickly, without harm, as such small amount of wax. The principal reason for its wonderful merit is that it works in harmony with physiological laws. Instead of hiding complexion defects, it removes them. It actually takes off the aged, faded, sallow, freckled or blotchy surface skin, gently, gradually, usually so unnoticed. It is Nature's way of renewing complexions. When the natural process is retarded because of deficient circulation or nerve tone, mercolized wax comes to the rescue and hastens the skin shedding. The new complexion which appears is a natural one, youthful, healthy, exquisitely beautiful. If you've never tried mercolized wax, get an ounce of it at the druggists, use at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning.

Another natural beautifying treatment—for wrinkled skin—is to bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel. This is remarkably and instantaneously effective.—Advertisement.

GIRLS KEEN FOR BIG SWIMMING CLASSIC

Fill Blanks, Girls, and Join in Big Swimming Race

Entry for Boston AMERICAN Girls' Championship Swimming Race:

NAME.....

AGE.....

ADDRESS.....

.....

.....

Boston and New England girls who are planning to enter the Boston AMERICAN'S annual swimming match for the girl's championship of New England are requested to send their enteries along now, without waiting until next week.

The Swimming Editor would also like photographs of those entering. Send your picture, if you have one handy, with your entry.

The date of the races was announced yesterday. It is Saturday afternoon, September 23, or one week from Saturday.

This will be the twelfth annual race in the Boston AMERICAN'S great contests to decide the best New England girl swimmer fro myear to year.

GREAT WATER CLASSIC.

The race has become the great water classic of the New England district. Spectators by the tens of thousands flock to the Charles River Basin, where the races are held, for the spectacle. Entries come from all over Greater Boston and from outside New England points.

Competition is keen among the contestants and interest runs high among the spectators. South Boston spectators, for instance, are eager for the Peninsula girls to furnish the winner. East Boston spectators shout for Noddle Island swimmers and so the feeling runs. But there has always been tremendous general enthusiasm for the winner at the end, no matter what district she represents.

WIN WIDE REPUTE.

Marion Gibson, winner of the last five races and one of the most wonderful girl swimmers ever developed this side of New York, has gained wide repute for her slendid work in these contests.

In sanding your entry be sure to state three things, thus:

Name.
Age.
Address.

Remember about the photograph, too, if possible. Send the entry and picture to the Swimming Editor, Boston AMERICAN, No. 82 Summer street, Boston.

Keep in mind the big date—Saturday afternoon, September 23.

WAR ON LITTER STIRS BOY SCOUTS

The Anti-Litter League has begun to be busy. Descriptions of spots in Boston which prevent it being a spotless town are being written for the AMERICAN to print.

If any landlord, tenant, householder, boarder of storekeeper doesn't wish to be held up to the gaze of the public as harboring litter in his yard, alley, room or basement he had better clean up at once.

Already the Boy Scouts are out peering into lots and under fences for subject matter to write about; someone in the South End has begun to act the part of a detective.

SUGGESTS NEW PAVING

Anti-Litter Editor:

Dear Sir—The AMERICAN editorial about banana skind breeding disease germs was all right and timely, but what of a street like Beach street under the Boston Elevated road with cobbles so rough and holes so deep that water and litter may be continually seen, smelt and walked in? No sweeping machine can do much for Beach street that gets very little sunlight and is too uneven for brushes to affect greatly. For the health of this section of the city should not a new paving be provided? A. F. J.

PLACE ON TREMONT STREET.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—This offer you are putting out to print descriptions of bad places in Boston should help to make the city clean and disease germproof. I wish to tell of a bad pile of litter heaped up against the back window of No. 641 Tremont street. Surely this cannot be healthy and should be removed at once. In the alley immediately back are also bad places where the surface is imperfect. Yours truly, L. T. M.

BOY SCOUT REPORTS.

Anti-Litter Editor:

We scouts believe this idea of an Anti-Litter League a good one and wish to help all we can.

Off Fabin street, South End, is a vacant lot with litter scattered over it. There are many papers and some remains of food, bricks and general dirt. It should be cleared up. I know.

A BOY SCOUT.

IN FAY STREET.

Here is another:

In Fay street, off Harrison avenue, there is much dirt and filth in gutters. I saw a girl walking in one of the piles. Is this good to do? And is she not liable to take and give disease?

LATEST STOCK MARKET NEWS

For the second time this week the New York market today had an even turn, or more than a million shares of stock in the first hours trading. Prices swung upward again and several stocks attained new high records by noon. The activity included about everything but the railroad stocks.

Exceptions in railroads were Reading and Union Pacific, the former shooting up 1¾ points to a new high record at 113¾, and the latter advancing to 142⅝, only ⅛ points below its high record.

Other high records were United States Steel 108⅝, General Motors 715, Republic Iron & Steel 68¾, Central Leather 64¾ and Utah Copper 93. High marks for the year were established by Bethlehem at 678 and Maxwell Motor at 99¾.

At noon the largest gains had been made by Bethlehem Steel, up 74 points, and General Motors, up 18. Other large gains were Industrial Alcohol's points, Mexican Petroleum 3, Studebaker 3½, Marine common 2¾, preferred 3¾, Anaconda 1, Inspiration 1, Utah 1, Westinghouse 1¾, New York Air Brake 3, National Lead 3, Car & Foundry 2¾, American Locomotive 1, Baldwin 2, Colorado 1, Lackawanna Steel 1¾, Republic Steel 1¾, U. S. Steel 1¾, New Haven 1¾, American Agricultural Chemical 2½.

Lackawanna Steel's attempt was in response to the scheme of putting the stock on a 6 per cent basis. Crucible Steel, after advancing nearly 2 points, forfeited all its gain and showed a slight loss on denial of the report that Bethlehem was acquiring control of the company.

Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies stocks, common and preferred, attained new high record prices in both New York and Boston markets.

BURR RIDICULES "KIMONO" SPEECHES

In picking words to clothes your thoughts beware of "kimono speeches."

Representative Burr, the Ward 11 Republican, jarred the Democrats in the special session with that phrase.

Replying in the Suffolk apportionment argument he said:

"After listening to all the kimono speeches I find it difficult to utilize all of the ten minutes allotted me to answer them. I find nothing to answer.

"Perhaps I ought to explain that a 'kimono speech' is one that covers everything but touches nothing."

People Should Establish Government Regulation of Monopoly Prices

THE farmers are demanding more for their milk. They ought to get it. The price now paid the farmers by the Milk Trust does not cover the actual cost of producing milk.

Milk is the most valuable food in the world. It is also one of the very cheapest and one of the least profitable to the PRODUCERS.

On the other hand, milk costs the CONSUMER all that it should cost.

The whole trouble lies in the cost of getting the milk from the producers to the consumers.

The Milk Trust stands between and pockets the profits.

It pays the farmers too little and charges the city customers too much.

Clearly there is only one way in which the farmers can get a better price and the city users of milk pay less, or at least no more, then they do now.

That is, to put an end to the Milk Trust's excessive go-between charges.

You will notice that we do not say put an end to the combination of milk dealers.

In the milk business, as in every other business, there is bound to be combination, and there should be combination in the interest of economy and efficiency.

But combinations naturally lead to monopoly, and private monopoly inevitably tends to extortion. There comes in the duty of government.

It is the business of government to regulate monopoly and to guard the people against extortion, even if it is necessary to fix prices.

Mr. Wilson's theory of COMPULSORY COMPETITION is ridiculous. It is a return to wastefulness and inefficiency. It is like discarding steam and electricity and going back to horses and stage-coaches.

Finding himself unable to deal with the trust situation by means of his out-of-date theory of compulsory competition, Mr. Wilson has fallen back on the alternative of doing nothing at all to curb the trusts.

The result is that never before in our whole history have trusts been so numerous, so defiant and so extortionate as they are now.

The further result is that never in our whole history has the cost of living been so high as at this very time, when the economies in the cost of production are in the highest state of efficiency we have ever known.

No wonder there seems to be no limit to the dividends and profits of these monopolies, when with one hand they reduce the cost of producing necessities to the lowest limits and with the other increase every day the price the people must pay for those necessities.

Now, then, either these unbearable conditions must continue to exist under Mr. Wilson's policy of non-interference or the trusts must be interfered with and regulated by the people through their government.

The practical and sensible way to deal with this question was set forth as long ago as 1912 by Mr. Hearst in an article in Hearst's Magazine for January of that year.

In that article Mr. Hearst said:

When a problem is acute and actual, the solution must be genuine and final.

If the evils of monopoly are to be eliminated, there are only two effective ways:

ONE WAY IS TO DESTROY THE EVIL AND WITH IT THE MONOPOLY WHICH CREATES THAT EVIL.

THE OTHER WAY IS TO SEPARATE THE EVIL FROM THE MONOPOLY AND DESTROY ONLY THE EVIL.

One way is to prevent combination and the other way is to permit combination, but prevent extortion.

One way is to compel business to compete against its will and contrary to its advantage, and the other way is to allow business to combine and to obtain the full advantage of combination, while compelling it to share that advantage with the public.

When considering the one alternative of destroying combination we must weigh carefully the two most vital reasons for not destroying it or attempting to destroy it.

One of these is the convincing reason against substituting an inferior method of production for a superior one, against compelling a wasteful and cumbersome method to be employed in place of an efficient and economical one.

The other reason is the impossibility of doing anything so contrary to nature and to natural development, so opposed to universal advantage and advancement.

HOW CAN WE BENEFIT BY REPLACING ORGANIZATION WITH DISORGANIZATION, SYSTEM WITH DISORDER, HARMONIOUS CO-OPERATION WITH CONFLICTING INDIVIDUAL EFFORT?

A faculty for organization is a measure of mental development.

A capacity for systematic effort is an evidence of business ability.

Combination is the expression of greater experience, better knowledge and higher intelligence, the result of education, the effect of gradual appreciation of certain fundamental principles and the transmission of those principles into practical operation.

Combination means economy. Combination means efficiency. Combination means system and simplicity, the elimination of unnecessary cogs in the business machinery.

Combination means increased production and decreased effort. Combination means stability, permanence, confidence, certainty, and every able business man knows it.

AS A CONSEQUENCE, THE BIG BUSINESS OF THE COUNTRY WILL POSITIVELY BE CONDUCTED IN COMBINATION, EITHER OPEN OR SECRET.

IF GOVERNMENT PERSECUTES COMBINATION, IT WILL MAKE COMBINATION SECRET.

IF GOVERNMENT RECOGNIZES AND ALLOWS COMBINATION, IT WILL MAKE COMBINATION PUBLIC.

IF COMBINATION IS SECRET, IT CANNOT BE REGULATED OR CONTROLLED.

IF COMBINATION IS PUBLIC, IT CAN BE REGULATED AND CONTROLLED IN THE INTEREST OF THE PUBLIC.

THE INEVITABLE, UNAVOIDABLE, INESCAPABLE CONCLUSION IS THAT COMBINATION SHOULD BE PERMITTED, SHOULD BE COMPELLED TO BE PUBLIC AND SHOULD BE REGULATED IN THE INTEREST OF THE PUBLIC.

Then how is it to be regulated and what is to regulate it?

Not combination itself, because combination will not regulate itself unselfishly; not the public, as a body, for the public has not the knowledge or organization to do it; but the government, the common representative of both the consuming public and the business interests.

Whenever business demands of government the right to combine, then business must concede to the government the power to impose conditions that will compel combination to operate for the public good.

If the combination constitutes a merger or monopoly extensive enough and powerful enough to fix prices, then the government must require that the prices fixed shall not be unreasonable or to the detriment of the public.

Thus the advantages of combination will be secured, not only for the producer, but for the consumer.

THUS CHEAPER PRODUCTION WILL MEAN CHEAPER PRICES; THUS THE ADVANTAGES OF COMBINATION WILL BECOME GENERAL, FOR THE PUBLIC WILL RECEIVE ITS FAIR SHARE OF THEM; THUS COMBINATION ITSELF WILL BECOME POPULAR, FOR IT WILL MEAN NOT A BURDEN UPON THE PUBLIC, BUT A BENEFIT TO THE PUBLIC.

Had the policy thus set forth by Mr. Hearst in January, 1912, been followed instead of the policy which Mr. Wilson has followed since March 4, 1913, the country would not now be in the throes of industrial warfare or the common people at the mercy of extortionate monopolies.

We should have had industrial peace with fair profits for producers and reasonable cost of necessities to consumers, and the whole country would have been better off and more contented and more prosperous.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

The Bridge to Storyland

JUST this side of Eight O'clock, along the road to Bed,
While still across the western hill the sunset glow is red,
You'll find a wistful little troupe of bright-eyed girls and boys,
Not ready yet for Slumbertown, but weary of their toys,
Who watch the old grandfather's clock until its laggard hand
Shall point the time to cross the bridge that leads to Storyland.

ACROSS that bridge are brighter worlds than this dull world of ours,
There red and blue-winged goblins vault across the shining flowers,
And giants build great fortresses upon the mountain's crown,
And very daring little boys walk up and hew them down,
And other awful dangers lurk to fill one's soul with fright,
But all the time we're very sure that all will turn out right.

ACROSS the bridge the children stay a short half hour or two,
Then little heads begin to nod, as sleepy heads will do,
And then they all come trooping back beneath the moon's soft beams
And take the evening boat that makes the quiet port of dreams.
But when the world rolls 'round again, once more they all will stand
Beside the entrance to the bridge that leads to Storyland.

Inter-Atomic Energy Some Day May Give Us Trips to the Moon

Garrett P. Serviss Says Journeys Through Space Can Be Accomplished as Soon as Someone Unlocks the Tremendous Power of the Atoms, Which Is Not at All Impossible

By Garrett P. Serviss

WITHIN a few weeks past I have been asked to address two different aeronautical societies on the curious subject of the possibilities of a trip to the moon.

As far as I am aware this does not indicate an intention on the part of any aviator to essay a voyage to our satellite, but, at least, it shows that the flying instinct is growing by what it feeds upon, and that, having navigated the air, practical men are giving a little extra rein to their imaginations and wondering whether the empire of birds marks the ultimate frontier of human conquest.

In fact, the dream of going to the moon, which, in every age, has occupied daring minds, is hardly more impracticable at the present time than would have been a project, springing up in the mind of Balboa, of making ships sail across from the Atlantic to the great western ocean which he saw from his peak in Darien.

Recent Discoveries Make It Unsafe to Scoff at "Dreams" of Imagination

But it is not the invention of either the aeroplane or the dirigible balloon that stimulates thoughtful minds at the present time to consider, half seriously, the idea of a lunar voyage. The success of those inventions, defying scientific predictions and probabilities, only forms an incentive. It turns men's minds hopefully to things that heretofore they have regarded as lying beyond the limits of human power.

It has always been so. Every great advance has been a marvel at the beginning, derided or laughed at. Each one of them has been a victorious birth of the imagination. The greatest drag on progress is lack of faith in the hidden capacities of man.

"Verily, I say unto you, if ye have faith, as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain: Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you."

That is high authority for believing that we are only just beginning to discover the extent of our control over nature, and such things as wireless telegraphy, X-ray photography and the disintegration of atoms, with consequent unlocking of tremendous concealed energy, prove that hitherto we have been like the man who buried his talents in the earth instead of making them produce ten or a hundred fold.

Many Sea Captains Have Traveled Farther Than the Distance to the Moon

Suppose we look at the subject of visiting the moon in the light of present knowledge. The distance in itself is nothing—240,000 miles! Many a sea captain has sailed much farther than that. It is less than ten times the circuit of the earth.

If the atmosphere extended from the earth to the moon, we could go there now by modifying our present apparatus. At a hundred miles an hour we could be there in a hundred days! But at the height of five or six miles the atmosphere becomes so rare that we could not live in it without an artificial supply. Yet unmanned balloons have gone ten miles high, and meteors take fire from friction at an elevation of a hundred miles or more.

Still the atmosphere does practically cease to exist at no very great elevation, and cuts short off the road of the balloon and the aeroplane.

We must turn to something else. The buoyant force of air enables us to overcome the gravitative attraction of the earth only up to a moderate height. Beyond that something more is needed. I have learned with surprise that many intelligent persons suppose that if we once got outside the air motion would be unimpeded. For instance, a man said to me the other day:

"Suppose an aeroplane could mount straight up until it passed the limits of the atmosphere, then having nothing more to impede its motion, it would go on with whatever velocity it had when it left the air."

In fact, this could only occur in case the velocity of the aeroplane amounted to nearly seven miles per second, for that velocity would be required to completely overcome the pull of the earth's attraction. Otherwise it would fall back to the earth.

This is the reason why Jules Verne, in his amusing story of "A Voyage to the Moon," had his adventurers shot out of an enormous cannon. Only in that way, he thought, could the requisite initial velocity be obtained.

Some Day a Bold Mind May Loose the Tremendous Power of the Atom

But a bold mind might, in view of recent discoveries, speculate on the illimitable power that may be obtained from unlocking the energies of the atoms of matter. Professor Thomson has calculated that a single gram of hydrogen has within it sufficient energy to lift a million tons a hundred yards high! Does anybody imagine that that unlimited store of energy is going forever to remain uncontrolled by human genius? We have discovered its existence; the next thing is to take it and use it.

Suppose we had it under control, as we shall have it some time. Then reflect upon the close relation between atomic phenomena and electricity, and recall the familiar experiment of making bits of pith fly away from an electrically charged ball. If we could construct some kind of a car that could be powerfully charged with electric energy we might be able to make it fly away from the earth as the pith balls fly from the charged conductor of the electric machine.

Then it would be necessary to establish a system of control by which the speed and direction could be regulated by varying the charge—AND THE PROBLEM OF NAVIGATING SPACE WOULD BE SOLVED. I have developed this (of course purely hypothetical) idea somewhat farther in a story called "A Columbus of Space."

Such a method would avoid all the difficulties, really insuperable, that hampered Jules Verne's plan of a projectile starting at a velocity of almost seven miles per second.

However, when we get the atomic energies under control our first efforts will be directed to making more money out of them, and trips to the moon will only begin to pay after we have got tired of purely earthly things.
